TENTATIVE AGREEMENT REACHED

Police Pay Fight Over—Maybe

Police in Victoria and Saanich Wednesday night reached tentative agreement with their commissions on a pay dispute.

If accepted by the memberships of the Victoria Police Union and the Saanich Police Association and police commissions, the pattern is expected to be extended to Oak Bay and Esquimalt policemen.

No details were released by either side pending ratification meetings, but leaders of both sides are recommending the settlement.

Key issue in the dispute was pay parity with Vancouver and lower mainland police forces, sought by policemen here and opposed by the police commissions. Greater Victoria police, at the first-class constable classification, earned $728 a month at the end of last year. Vancouver area police in a one-year settlement this year, earn $887 a month at the comparable classification.

An earlier offer by Victoria which would have brought the first-class constable pay to $884 by July 1 of next year was rejected by policemen.

Meetings to accept or reject the tentative settlement are expected to be held Friday night.

A joint statement was issued shortly before midnight by both sides after an all-day session involving both Victoria and Saanich under mediation officer Clark Gilmour.

The statement said "a basis of settlement has been reached," that both sides unanimously agreed to recommend settlement and that the terms would be submitted to memberships and police commissions wihout delay.

"Full credit must be given to Mr. Gilmour for his patience, perseverance and assistance generally, without which it is most doubtful that terms of settlement acceptable to all negotiating committees would have been reached," the statement said.

Police Slowdown Costing $20,000 Monthly: Pollen

The Victoria police union's work-to-rule stance is costing the city $20,000 a month in lost revenue, council's finance committee learned today.

Committee asked for a full report on the effects of the union action from the police commission.

All police operations that involve revenues to the city are being "soft-pedalled," acting Mayor Clyde Savage said.

City officials later refused to estimate the total cost of the police union's bargaining lever.

Both sides in the pay contract dispute reached a secret tentative settlement Wednesday night, city manager Bill Hooson said, and the city is not prepared to jeopardize the chances of a final agreement.

The work-to-rule stance brought a blast from Ald. Peter Pollen, who indicated he did not think the matter was entirely the responsibility of the Police Commission.

'TREASON'

"I don't think we have asked enough questions. I mean, who's running who?"

"I am advised we are losing $20,000 a month. As I mentioned earlier, 100 years ago this would have been considered treason."

POLLEN

Hooson said that his understanding of the work-to-rule guidelines is that police are exercising their right to use "discretion" in booking certain offences.

Ald. Tom Christie described it by saying there is "free parking" on one-hour and two-hour roadside parking areas.

Savage said "it's quite obvious" that the simple revenue areas of police work are being "soft-pedalled" but added "I can assure you that things like break and entry" are being watched even more than normally.

WHY PAY?

When Savage said the city has to treat the situation like any business might, Pollen interjected:

"When you have a strike in any business, you don't pay your workers." The police, however, are getting paid and not doing their jobs, he added.

"I don't suggest they are not protecting citizens . . . but they are also losing $20,000 a month."

Hooson said later the full details of what the work-to-rule action has cost the city will be revealed following a work agreement.

Aldermen Support Delay In Hike on Permit Fees

Increases on construction permit fees should not become effective until Sept. 1, Victoria council's finance committee recommended to council today.

The committee made the decision after a delegation of contractors said the industry had not been given fair warning of the increase, established last spring at budget time.

Mike Griffin, a plumbing contractor and spokesman for the building industries, said businessmen did not disagree with the philosophy of the 20-per-cent increase in permit fees, but they thought notification of the hike was "overlooked" by city officials.

Fees already charged at the higher rates may be redeemed on request.

The delegation left the meeting while committee was talking of a three-month extension of the old fee structure.

Ald. Peter Pollen suggested an Oct. 1 date, but Ald. Tom Christie, opposing any extension initially, finally settled for Sept. 1.

LEFT OUT

The industry argued that contracts awarded before the fee hike did not include the increase in their costs.

Tom Lawson, an electrical contractor, said his firm might have lost $500 on its contract on the new Victoria Press Ltd. building, had the fee increase become effective two days earlier.

Christie said contractors always must face changes in cost between contracting bidding and awarding dates.

But Griffin said "we get a guarantee on the prices we are going to get" form supply companies.

"We know all costs: this one of the few areas where we find all of a sudden a significant increase.

The decision to increase the fees had been made to make fees charged pay for the service.

Cyclists May Pay to Ride

The free status of the bicycle rider in Victoria may be coming to an end.

Council's finance committee today asked for a report from city officials on the feasibility of licensing and registering all bicycles in the city.

Comptroller Jim Bramley said council should not expect to make any money out of such an operation, but registration might provide some control.

Estimates of the number of bicycles operating in the Greater Victoria area are as high as 55,000.

Committee was told Oak Bay at present licenses bicycles and keeps track of serial numbers on a computer.

SANDRINGHAM

'Plenty of Life' Left in Strike

The Victoria Labor Council was told Wednesday night there is "plenty of life" remaining in the 44-week strike against Sandringham Private Hospital.

"There are those who say Sandringham is a lost cause," said Jack Phillips, co-ordinator for Local 1311 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees on strike since Sept. 30 for a first contract.

"All I say is, judge not the play 'til the final curtain is down."

He criticized hospital administrator Mrs. Margaret Reynolds — "The scabherder in chief" — and Labor Minister James Chabot — "the cream puff."

NO APOLOGIES

Both persons, he said, have claimed that 75 per cent of the original 28 strikers are working at other jobs. He offered no apologies if this was the case because those who are working elsewhere are in difficult financial circumstances.

"If these reports are true, and I believe they are, they indicate Chabot is working in cahoots with the management of Sandringham with the deliberate aim of smashing the strike," he said.

He believed that "the stage is being set" for a second attempt to decertify Local 1311 as bargaining agent for the employees. An earlier attempt by management was rejected by the Labor Relations Board.

Taking aim at those who have replaced the strikers and kept the private hospital running, Phillips said "scabs are on a level with child molesters."

He said success or failure of the Sandringham strike would make the difference between opening the way for a big organizing drive among "thousands of bitterly exploited service workers, mostly women" or closing the door to this opportunity.

Phillips said Chabot is not intervening "because the cabinet does not want him to move, because geriatric care should be a government responsibility, not of petty speculators."

One delegate said he has heard "a lot of flowery talk" but "we do nothing but talk. I imagine in another 10 months it will be the same."

Phillips said he had been sent here only 3½ weeks ago as full-time co-ordinator and that there was no one working full time on the strike before. He said he would debate this subject, but privately.

Amchitka 2 Nudge Premiers

The Victoria-based organization opposed to the proposed nuclear test blast on Amchitka Island in October will not be satisfied with a mere postponement of the blast — it wants the test abandoned.

The group — Amchitka Two — has sent a telegram to the provincial premiers attending a conference in Victoria which started today. The telegram read:

"Postponement of the nuclear test on Amchitka Island to May 1972 is not good enough. We want immediate united action by the premiers of the provinces of Canada to urge President Nixon to cancel 'Cannikin'."

The U.S. Senate last week voted to postpone the blast until May, 1972, unless Nixon authorizes it. The test is a five-megaton explosion on the small island in the Aleutian chain.

Numerous conservation and ecology groups have opposed the scheduled test, saying it will endanger wildlife and possibly trigger earthquakes and tidal waves on the Pacific Coast.

Amchitka Two has also announced it plans to hold a silent vigil on the lawn in front of the Legislative Buildings to commemorate the 26th anniversary of the dropping of an atomic bomb on Hiroshima, Japan, on Aug. 6, 1945.

The vigil will be held through the night.

RCMP Warn of Bad Trips From 'Orange Sunshine'

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police today issued a warning to potential drug-users about a bad strain of LSD which is circulating in the city.

The drug, known locally as "Orange Sunshine," has been found to contain mostly strychnine, a deadly poison.

The force's drug squad reports the drug has caused bad reactions among users. Fifteen cases have been reported in the last three weeks.

The drug is said to have originated in California.

Oak Bay 'Vigilantes' Form

Seventy-five residents of Oak Bay's Windsor Park area Wednesday night formed a group which will make suggestions on community issues to Oak Bay council and planners.

The group was formed in response to a challenge by the Vancouver Island Chapter of the Architectural Institute of British Columbia's Project Peninsula.

One of the chief topics under discussion was a Vancouver developer's bid to erect two nine-storey towers on a block immediately overlooking the park.

A committee of four was formed and instructed to examine the master plan for Oak Bay, proposed in 1967.

Other issues of concern to the group are the cleaning up of Oak Bay Beach, the threat of spot zoning for high density developments and the provision of adequate neighborhood amenities.

The meeting is the second to be held in the neighborhood. The first was in mid-July.

The next meeting will be held Sept. 9 at 7 p.m. in the park pavilion with subsequent meetings planned for the first Thursday of each month.

IT WOULD BE UNFAIR to term last May's Miles for Millions a failure. After all, thousands of young and older Victorians tackled the 25-mile hike, and other thousands paid off for the miles these achieved. But the blister derby has proved a much less than total success, and it's probable that any future march will be planned to an altered recipe.

In May, a take of $100,000 was hoped for.

In the aftermath of the walk, a total collection of about $75,000 in mile-rates was expected.

Today, with approximately $60,000 in the kitty, University of Victoria Miles for Millions organizers are confronted by what amounts to a $15,000 deficit.

This could mean that various agencies among which the take is to be distributed will receive smaller sums than anticipated when cheques are sent out.

As a last-ditch hope of boosting the total, the campus committee has decided on a direct appeal to citizens who haven't been called on by marchers they backed.

If you happen to be among these, you are asked to deposit money pledged in the Bank of Montreal Miles for Millions account, or to turn it in at Uvic Student Union building.

Bob Ballam, acting committee chairman, tells me that another march won't be held for at least 18 months. Meanwhile, he and other committee members are questioning the wisdom of spreading returns from the next walk among 21 different organizations — an approach which Ballam fears may have reduced public interest.

"I think we should get back to fund-raising for one specific international project," he said.

A sound idea. Perhaps a well-focussed project like the original one—the providing of schools-in-vans for underdeveloped countries—might do the trick.

Tucked away in my fishing kit are some anglers' lures from far Siberia. My sister who returned to Vancouver last week from travels in foreign parts, came on them in an Irkutsk shop and decided to gladden my heart with them.

One item is a set of little wabblers fitted with treble hooks, that I mean to dunk as soon as may be. But what intrigues me most is a card of artificial "flies" the like of which I've never seen before.

Each consists of a large hook sparsely-wrapped with red thread. Up front is tied a sheaf of four white plastic wings laid back to back.

Perhaps some sport fisherman who has wet a line in Siberian waters would be kind enought to fill me in on these creations. How do you fish 'em, and for what?

In the course of any work-year, I meet a number of men and women who want to be writers, but few who back their hopes by fitting ideas with words. And much too often, those who do so give up the struggle after a few rejection slips.

Not all of them, though. One of the exceptions called me this week in the course of a visit to Victoria. He asked me if I remembered a long talk we had over coffee in Toronto many years ago.

I was in the magazine business then, and talked with a lot of working and would-be writers. Still, I did recall a young man who not only wanted to write, but was toiling with ideas and words.

For him, the break-through has been a very long time coming. There were interruptions of various sorts, setbacks and discouragements. I'm glad to report, however, that he has just placed a five-part serial with CBC radio.

It's scheduled for September. Byline, John Keith, and more power to his typewriter.

LOD, Israel (Reuter) — A military court imposed stiff prison setences today on two young Moroccan sisters and a West German convicted of smuggling sabotage materials into the country and planning to blow up hotels in Tel Aviv and Haifa.

Nadia Bashir Bardali, 26, of Morocco was sentenced to 12 years, her sister Marlene 21, to 10 years. Evelyn Barj, 21, from West Germany, was given a 14 year sentence.

The three were arrested last April as they arrived at Lod airport from France, carrying explosives, detonators and timing devices hidden on their bodies.

Kaiser Grows

A new mineral exploration company to operate in B.C. has been set up by Kaiser Aluminum, of Oakland, Calif.

Kaiser Exploration and Mining Co., to have its field office in Vancouver and executive headquarters in Oakland, was incorporated in B.C. July 14.

The firm was first organized as a Delaware-based company on Sept. 24, 1968, with the objects of exploring for, mining, milling, processing and marketing all types of ores and minerals.

Kaiser Exploration, operating independently of Kaiser Resources Ltd., has the following Oakland executives as its directors: Thomas J. Ready jr., Alfred N. Warburton jr., Thomas K. McCarthy, Wallace Macgregor and William Hobbs.

MEDICARE EXPANSION URGED BY LABOR

The B.C. government should use medicare surpluses to improve benefits "especially free medicare for all old people," Victoria Labor Council delegates agreed Wednesday night.

Secretary Larry Ryan said accumulated surpluses amount to more than $42 million, but last year some paramedical benefits were cut in half.

The council agreed to call on the government to restore the full chiropractic benefit.

"The government is using medicare as a profit-oriented plan rather than a people-oriented plan," he said.

Council vice-president John Schibli urged affiliated unions to follow up the labor council's action. He said there are a lot of back ailments among construction workers and chiropractic services were both needed and useful.

The council also endorsed an earlier statement by the B.C. Federation of Labor ciriticizing the cabinet's granting of powers to Health Minister Ralph Loffmark over doctors privileges to practise in individual hospitals.

Province Names MacLean Deputy Transport Minister

Fraser MacLean, 45, has been named deupty minister of commercial transport for the provincial government.

A native of New Westminster, MacLean joined the provincial government 24 years ago and has been assistant deputy minister of highways for nine years.

Commercial Transport Minister Frank Richter said the appointment will mark a new era of increased liaison between his department and the highways department in the regulation of commercial trucking.

MacLean replaces A. J. Bowering, who took an early retirement from the civil service after more than 35 years' service. MacLean is married and has four children. He graduated from University of British Columbia in 1947 with a degree in mechanical engineering.

ALL-NEW CORTINA

Just arrived from Europe.

A lot more little car. Because we demand a lot more of it.

A lot more durability
Canada challenges a car. The all-new Cortina has been designed to meet—and beat—that challenge.
Brakes, engine, electrical system, heating system, all engineered to tackle this country's varied driving and climate conditions.
Even the finish is special. It's electro-coated to fight rust in even the most inaccessible areas.

A lot more go
A 2 litre Overhead Camshaft engine is standard. It has been skillfully modified to give you more power without increasing gas consumption. It packs a 100 horsepower.
And for those who wish less get up and go a 1600 cc OHV engine is optional.

A lot more stop
Fade-resistant power front disc brakes are standard. There's minimal effort in bringing the car to a fast stop.
The rear drum brakes have no sliding cylinders or shoe anchors to go wrong. And the whole Dual Line Brake System is sealed against dirt and water.

A lot better ride
The 101.5 inch long wheelbase accounts for the smoother ride.
The front Short and Long arm Suspension plus a Stabilizer Bar provides a quieter ride and improved handling.
Rack-and-pinion steering which offers quick, precise maneuverability is standard.
At the rear the traditional leaf springs are replaced by a 4-bar link system which improves the ride.
Drive Cortina and see.

A lot more room everywhere
For a small car, Cortina gives you plenty of head, hip and leg room. This was accomplished by widening the track to 56 inches. And making the inside wider.
There's more room in the rear, and the back seat passengers sit ahead of the rear axle for a more comfortable ride.
And the trunk, 12 cubic feet with new, easier low-level loading.

A lot more comfort
Cortina gives you a higher degree of comfort than you'd expect to find on an import.
The front bucket seats are fully reclining. They have been scientifically designed to give firmer lumbar and lateral support. This fixes you firmly in the seat leaving you more relaxed. Lengthy journeys somehow seem shorter.
Instruments are located conveniently within easy reach.
The headlining is perforated for sound absorption, loop-pile carpeting fitted throughout, grab handles are for your convenience and there's even a cigarette lighter.

There's a Cortina for every need
Cortina L comes in a 2-door or 4-door version. Then there's Cortina GT. And finally a great Cortina 4-door Estate Wagon. It features 63.8 cu. ft. of storage space when the rear seat is folded down.

Service just about everywhere
Throughout Canada there are Mercury and Ford dealers ready to give you any service you may require. Each one will honour your warranty.
This might not mean much to you between home and office. But we find most people like to travel around in Cortinas. And it's nice to know we're there if you need us.
And you'll be pleased to hear Cortina is designed to run 6,000 miles between service intervals after your first check-up.

A lot more for your money
Cortina comes as a complete car. It has built-in standard features others offer as options. Like power front disc brakes, electric rear window defroster, cigarette lighter, reclining bucket seats, full-carpeting and the 2 litre OHC engine.
We haven't mentioned the low price. It's right there at the bottom of this advertisement. We're proud of that, too.

26,000-ACRE INFERNO NEARS TOWN

Residents Flee Raging Fire

Smoke from 26,000-acre fire, raging out of control, billows over Rogers Pass

GOLDEN (CP)—Most of the 140 residents of Donald Station fled their homes Wednesday night when a raging 26,000-acre forest fire roared to within 2½ miles of the small lumbering community 15 miles north of Golden. The flames have burned for more than two weeks and are out of control.

"Family after family are loading up their pickup trucks and getting out as fast as they can," said Helen Drage, who lives on a small farm about a mile out of town.

"It was a terrible sight earlier in the day, but the wind is going down now and I think everything will be all right."

Forestry officials had warned of a possible evacuation, but most of the residents left on their own. The Drages and their daughter, however, decided to stick it out, at least until today.

"I'm not worried, but there isn't much else we can do," said Mrs. Drage. "We can't go off and leave our chickens and pigs."

STRONG WINDS

A forestry spokesman said strong, changing winds have made it difficult to get a hold on any of the big fires burning in the Mica Creek-Golden area just inside the B.C.-Alberta border, 135 miles west of Calgary.

Arthur Krane, a deputy ranger with the forest service, said 200 men worked through the night with heavy equipment to construct fire roads around the town.

Krane said the roads would not be completed until later today, and if the wind blows from the north before then "Donald could easily be lost."

An RCMP officer said the fire is also threatening the Trans-Canada Highway, but "Donald will get it before the road does."

WILL STAY

The town is supported by Evans Products Ltd. which has a $20 million sawmill operation in the area.

Mat Seery, a lumber grader with the company, said he and most of the other men are prepared to stay and fight for the mill and their livelihoods.

"If the mill burns, I'm out of a job. I have to fight."

CP Rail, which has a survey crew with mobile homes in the town, hooked the trailers to trucks Wednesday so they could be moved out at a moment's notice.

TOWN DESTROYED

The area is no stranger to fires. The original town was destroyed by a forest fire near the start of the century, and 13 years ago a local fire destroyed a sawmill.

The blaze, named Sue Fire by forestry officials, was started by a lightning strike which hit a lumber scrap heap at Susan Lake, 20 miles west of Donald Station.

The fire has since cut through a swath of timber 13 miles by six miles, most of it fir, spruce, cedar and hemlock.

40 DIE, 100 HURT IN TRAIN CRASH

BELGRADE (CP)—At least 40 persons were reported killed and about 100 injured Wednesday night when a passenger train and a freight collided head-on in a curve southeast of the Yugoslav capital.

The casualties were all aboard the passenger train, a six-car, short-haul motor train known as a rail bus.

Strom Wants Ottawa Out

Premier Harry Strom of Alberta today called for the withdrawal of the federal government from medical care and hospital insurance programs.

Strom, who released a text of his submission this morning told the premiers' conference the federal government should "unconditionally transfer federal funds or taxing powers" to the provinces in getting out of the fields. Ottawa pays 50 per cent of costs of medicare and hospitalization on a national average basis.

Strom said he was sure that a mutually acceptable agreement could be reached to provide provinces with an adequate source of funds to account for both inflation and productivity factors in different provinces.

'ABSURD'

The current health system is "absurd" in its "almost complete lack of any meaningful element of financial accountability," said Strom.

He also asked the federal government to abandon its plans to tax the employers' share of medicare premiums, a measure which could cost Alberta taxpayers $9.6 million next year.

It will cost B.C. taxpayers an estimated $10 million.

Strom also called for improvements in the methods of getting Prairie grain to market.

AMONG TOPICS

Fiscal and economic questions, the "chicken and egg war," pollution control and drug addiction are among the topics being discussed in the two-day meeting.

Ontario Premier William Davis, attending his first premiers' conference, said he will suggest that the premiers consider making their annual meeting a more formal continuing structure with a permanent staff to carry on the work during the year.

Several premiers indicated their willingness to discuss the constitutional issue with Quebec Premier Bourassa in

MONEY CRISIS TWISTED BY LONDON

LONDON (Reuter) — The European currency crisis revolving around the United States dollar and the French franc took a new turn today when some London banks were quoting different rates for transactions in the two currencies.

For commercial deals, the French unit was being quoted at its official intervention rate of 5.5125-5.5126 to the U.S. dollar while for non-commercial transactions the quote was 5.5000-5.5075. (See page 10).

Germ War Treaty Presented

GENEVA (Reuter) — The United States and the Soviet Union presented to the Geneva disarmament conference today a draft treaty banning germ weapons.

The 25-country conference is expected to reach agreement on the draft tabled by its co-chairmen in time for it to be submitted as an agreed conference document to the United Nations General Assembly in New York next month. But some Western and non-aligned delegations said outside the conference hall today they will seek some revisions in the draft.

TWO DOCUMENTS

Presentation of the draft follows negotiations here between Western and Communist delegations on merging two basically similar documents outlawing germ warfare, one tabled by Britain two years ago and the other by the Soviet Union and its Communist allies in March this year.

The 14 article draft outlaws the development, production, stockpiling and acquisition of biological weapons.

It also calls for the destruction of existing stocks "as soon as possible but not later than ... months."

The number of months was left blank and the first speaker at today's session, Soviet delegate Alexei Roschchin, said this was because some delegations said original proposals for a three-month time-limit might be insufficient for them. He did not name the countries which had taken this view.

One-China Policy Held By Canada—Trudeau

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau says Canada will not support a United States proposal for a two-China policy in the United Nations.

Mr. Trudeau made the statement Wednesday in reply to questions at a news conference during a three-hour visit to St. John's on an Atlantic provinces tour.

Mr. Trudeau said Canada had told the U.S. "we would in no way support any resolution that could be considered a two-China policy."

Asked about the U.S. plan to oppose any move to oust Nationalist China from the U.N. he said the matter would be decided by bargaining.

Canada had adopted a one-China policy when it recognized the Peking government.

WANTS TAIWAN IN

The U.S. announced Monday it would support the seating of mainland China in the UN but would ask the General Assembly this fall to allow Nationalist China to retain its seat.

Eighteen countries supporting Peking have submitted a resolution that would expel representatives of Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist government on Formosa from the UN.

The resolution would have the General Assembly recognize the People's Republic of China as the only legitimate representative of the country.

Turkey recognized Communist China today and simultaneously cut off relations with the Nationalist government on Taiwan.

CANADIANS IMPRESSED BY RUSSIAN ARCTIC

MOSCOW (UPI) — Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien returns to Canada today after leading a party of 10 northern specialists on a 17-day, 11,000-mile tour through Siberia and the Soviet north to see how the Soviet Union handles northern development.

Chretien told newsmen Wednesday his group was "most impressed" by the gas pipelines and a dam which the Russians have built on permafrost.

Chretien said "on portions we were able to observe, there appeared to be no environmental damage and good re-establishment of the vegetation."

Canada has no pipelines in its permafrost regions.

Chretien said he expected a Soviet delegation of northern experts to visit Canada "this fall."

Court Says Sharp Must Give Testimony

MONTREAL (CP) — Lawyer Robert Lemieux obtained a subpoena Wednesday requiring Mitchell Sharp, federal external affairs minister, to testify in court in connection with last October's kidnaping crisis.

The subpoena, won in Superior Court, requires Sharp to appear Friday before Court of Queen's Bench.

In his petition for the subpoena, Lemieux said he wants Sharp to explain why he refused to negotiate the safe conduct to Cuba of a rogatory commission headed by a Montreal judge to obtain testimony from seven persons sent there in exchange for the safe release of James Cross, British trade commissioner.

Cross was abducted Oct. 5 by terrorists and released to police Dec. 3 in return for the safe conduct to Cuba of the seven persons. The Front de Libération du Quebec claimed responsibility for the abduction.

TESTIMONY VITAL

Lemieux said testimony of Jacques Lanctot, Jacques Cossette-Trudel, his wife Louise, Pierre Seguin and Marc Carbonneau, among those sent to Cuba, would provide much-needed information on three of Lemieux's clients.

Lemieux is defending Francois Lapetot, Claude Morency and Andre Roy accused of various charges made against them before the October kidnappings of Cross and Quebec Labor Minister Pierre Laporte who later was slain.

The trio face more than 40 charges involving dynamite possession and conspiracy to kidnap. They allegedly robbed a University of Montreal credit union of $58,000.

Securities Thefts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. Senate investigators disclosed Wednesday that more than $491 million in securities have been reported stolen in the United States so far this year — more than twice the total for all of 1970 and more than $100 million more than for the last two years combined.

U.S. Role 'Defensive'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon has declared United States responsibility for offensive ground-combat operations in Vietnam at an end.

"American forces in Vietnam today," as you can tell from reading the reports, are in defensive positions ... frankly just defending the area in which we have responsibility," Nixon told a news conference Wednesday.

Defence Secretary Melvin R. Laird said a few hours later the president's remarks mean the first part of the administration's Vietnamization program is "virtually completed."

Meanwhile, the usually hawkish House of Representatives voted for the first time Wednesday for a measure to end the war in Vietnam.

By 205 to 198 votes, it approved an amendment to the military conscription bill.

KY OFF BALLOT

SAIGON (UPI) — The South Vietnamese supreme court today declared Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky ineligible for the presidential elections. Gen. Duong Van "Big" Minh threatened to pull out, and it appeared President Nguyen Van Thieu may be the only candidate.

The supreme court said Ky and Nguyen Tran, a minor candidate, did not have the necessary backers and could not run in the Oct. 3 elections. Minh threatened once again to withdraw on grounds Thieu was rigging the election and that his followers were being harassed.

The Thieu government has used the meanest tricks to prevent the Ky-Le Ticket from obtaining the full endorsement of the required number of provincial councilmen and to keep this ticket out of the presidential race," he said.

Peking N-Missiles Reported by U.S.

WASHINGTON (WP) — New evidence gathered by U.S. intelligence indicates that Communist China has begun to deploy a small number of nuclear-tipped, medium range ballistic missiles, according to informed government sources.

The missiles have an estimated range of about 1,000 miles, far too short to threaten U.S. territory, but enough to reach some military installations and one or two large cities in the Soviet Union as well as other targets in Asia, including Japan and Taiwan.

Deployment of operational MRBMs by the Chinese has been anticipated for some time at the Pentagon, but evidence that emplacement had actually started was only recently obtained.

The number of operational missiles spotted so far by U.S. reconnaissance satellites is said to be quite small — fewer than 20.

U.S. defence department officials say they are reluctant to draw any conclusions — based on this small initial deployment regarding how many of these missiles the Chinese will eventually field. Officials say they still believe that Peking is placing more emphasis on development of an intermediate-range ballistic missile, one that would have a range about twice that of the MRBMs now being deployed.

A missile able to fly 2,000 miles would enable China to situate these weapons well back from its own borders, providing some safety against attack if their locations were not pinpointed by an enemy. Such rockets would also be able to reach many more of the Soviet Union's heartland cities, thus adding to their deterrent effect.

U.S. Defence Secretary Laird estimated in March, that the Chinese would have "a modest number" of both types of missiles by mid-1972.

The Chinese nuclear arsenal, which also includes a number of light and medium jet bombers, is still miniscule compared with that of the Soviet Union.

As some defence analysts view things, however, the Chinese are approaching a point where the Russians could no longer be certain they would escape nuclear retaliation entirely if they staged a surprise attack on China.

Doctors, Province Talk On New Medical Rules

The provincial government and British Columbia's doctors began talks today on one of two orders-in-council which have recently angered the medical profession.

Wasting no time after Premier Bennett's announcement Wednesday that the government was going to discuss possible "improvements" with the doctors, a special committee headed by Health Minister Ralph Loffmark met with representatives of the medical profession this morning for discussions which were expected to continue all day.

The meeting is considering the cabinet order-in-council last week which gave Loffmark power to grant, restrict or deny hospital privileges to doctors.

Doctors have branded it political interference in the practice of medicine. Loffmark has said the power is needed to ensure a more even distribution of doctors throughout the province.

Other government representatives in today's meeting are Donald Cox, deputy minister of hospital insurance, and Dr. George Elliott, assistant deputy minister for public health.

A committee headed by provincial secretary Wesley Black is scheduled to meet with doctors' representatives next Tuesday morning to discuss the other controversial cabinet order which gives the Provincial Medical Services Commission power to licence medical laboratories and other diagnostic facilities.

Black's committee includes Geoffrey Stewart, chairman of the commission, and Gerald Bryson, deputy minister of finance.

Licensing of laboratories has been interpreted by doctors as a move to squeeze a number of private operations out of business, some of them run by doctors. The government wants to trim rapidly climbing diagnostic costs, in part by fuller utilization of public laboratories, located mainly in hospitals.

Trans-Canada Highway offered their services.

Meanwhile, rampaging forest fires in the Northwest Territories have cut power, telephone and highway travel to several northern centres.

Pete Ferguson, fire control officer for the Mackenzie District forest service, said today telephone communications from Fort Smith have been cut by a fire raging through 250,000 acres of timber in the southwest corner of the territories. Communications were being maintained by radio.

He said Hydro lines from the Snare River dam site are still out and Yellowknife continues to use an emergency electrical system. Transportation on the highway between Yellowknife and Fort Providence was still limited.

No new fires had been reported, but 260 fires continue out of control in 620,000 acres of timber in the Great Slave Lake area, he said.

Ray Schmidt, radio control officer for the service, said Wednesday a switch to northerly winds has diverted the fire from the area of the Nahanni River National Park. The blaze was being carried into scrub forest on the mountainside and could burn itself out.

He offered no hope the fires could be extinguished before the fall rains, expected in late August. The cost of fighting the blaze was estimated at $1.5 million.

In Alberta, about 200 firefighters were battling 28 blazes today in the province's north. Of these, 11 were burning out of control and 12 are under partial or full control. Their sizes ranged from one to 1,000 acres.

An Alberta Forest Service spokesman said winds have been fanning the fires, but cooler weather has inhibited further outbreaks. Rain had lowered the fire danger in the south, but none was expected to help the situation in the north.

Some improvement was reported Wednesday in the coastal areas of B.C. but conditions in the eastern part of the province remained critical.

B.C.'s largest fire, the 250,000-acre "Tee" fire 135 miles north of Fort Nelson, continued to spread over barren scrub pine. Fire guards were under construction on its south and west sides to protect more valuable timber.

Several big fires were burning in the Prince George district — a 1,200-acre fire near Takla Lake, a 9,000-acre fire about 65 miles west of Fort Nelson and another 6,700-acre blaze near Finlay Forks.

'NOT US' —DISTILLERY

VERNON (CP) — Officials of the Hiram Walker Distillery at Winfield have rejected suggestions discharge from the plant is discoloring the Kalamalka Lake near Oyama. Council asked the company to stop the discharge until reason for the discoloration could be found, but the company replied the plant had been designed to ensure no pollution would result.

New Firm Bids On Pipe

By AB KENT

A newly-formed Vancouver company is one of two definite applicants to build a proposed natural gas pipeline to Vancouver Island under terms set out by Premier Bennett in April.

Centennial Natural Gas Pipeline Ltd. director Kenneth W. Smith, of Vancouver, said today his firm's proposal tried to conform to the rules Bennett outlined, including a 10 per cent limit to equity ownership by any one firm.

B.C. Hydro, the only other confirmed applicant, may hold 25 per cent of any company formed to build and operate the first gas line to the island.

TWO OTHERS

Two other Canadian companies are reported to have applied — Malaspina Gas Pipeline Ltd., of Vancouver, and Trans-Prairie Pipelines Ltd., of Calgary and Edmonton.

The government has made no announcement since the closing date for proposals July 31.

Centennial Natural Gas Pipeline was registered as a B.C. company before the end of last week. Its directors are Charles D. Bailey, president, a Vancouver executive; Robert R. Smith, a West Vancouver construction manager, and Kenneth Smith, also of West Vancouver, who is a vice-president of the consulting firm H. A. Simons (International) Ltd., Vancouver.

NO DETAILS GIVEN

Kenneth Smith said he could give no details of the Centennial proposal in the absence of a government announcement.

A similar position was taken by B.C. Hydro chairman Gordon M. Shrum.

According to Bennett's rules, it seems likely that development of a gas line to the Island would be the result of a joint venture by several participating companies, which could include some of the major consumers such as the forest industry.

informal, private talks, but the subject is not on the agenda.

It was learned later that the proposed agenda for the meeting includes the major topics of fiscal reform, pollution control, drug addiction, investment matters including foreign ownership, agricultural questions including the interprovincial trade issue and medicare.

Premier Schreyer of Manitoba said earlier that fiscal questions will probably occupy about one-third of the time of the conference.

TAX REFORM

The impact of federal tax reform and the possibility of federal withdrawal from shared-cost programs will be prime topics, he indicated.

It wasn't known what the first item on the agenda would be but Premier Blakeney of Saskatchewan said he understood the Agenda would be arranged to suit Premier Strom who was expected to stay only one day. Strom is in the midst of an election campaign.

Blakeney said "a certain common approach and design" could be expected between the Saskatchewan and Manitoba Governments which both have New Democratic Party governments, but there won't be automatic agreement between the two, he said.

Pollution and Indian education are also expected to be discussed.

FACE ULTIMATUM

Earlier Wednesday in Vancouver, Premier Hatfield of New Brunswick said governments in North America face the ultimatum of reform or revolution.

"Consensus Liberalism" has failed to maintain faith in governments and has disenfranchised various groups, particularly the young and the poor, he said.

U.K. Passes Strike-Curb Legislation

LONDON (CP) — The House of Commons approved the Conservative government's controversial strike-control bill early today, but British labor unions vowed to make it fail.

The measure is designed to curb the wave of wildcat strikes that has helped bring the British economy to near stagnation.

The Commons approved the bill by a vote of 254 to 217 after eight months of amendments, debate and one-day protest strikes.

Royal assent, making the bill law, is expected later today.

Last year the unions forced Harold Wilson's Labor government to withdraw a similar bill and they now have pledged a policy of non-co-operation which could make the law unworkable.

Habitual Traffic Offenders

10,000 MAY LOSE LICENCE

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP)—Nearly 10,000 Washington motorists may find themselves on the verge of losing their drivers' licences for five years when the habitual offender law goes into effect Monday, says Jack Nelson, director of the department of motor vehicles.

Aimed at weeding chronic traffic law violators from the state's highways, the new law labels as "habitual offender" anyone who has been convicted or forfeited bail 20 or more times or who has had three or more temporary licence suspensions during the last five years.

Nelson said Wednesday he estimates 3,500 drivers fall in the first category and 6,500 others have had licences revoked at least twice putting them dangerously close to earning the "habitual" description. The law will affect only those motorists who commit another offence on or after next Monday, he said.

JULY'S SUN DOUBLES

Victorians absorbed a total of 358.4 hours of sunshine in July, according to the Gonzales Observatory's monthly weather summary.

July sunshine nearly doubled June's total and was 21.4 hours above the monthly average.

Maximum temperature was 80.5 degrees on July 19. Minimum low temperature was 46.2 degrees on July 2, the lowest for July since 1952 when 45.2 degrees was reported.

No rain fell after July 10. Only .55 inches of rain fell all month, slightly less than normal.

This was the least windy July since 1913. Mean wind speed was 8.5 miles per hour.

No fogs or thunderstorms were recorded. July's mean temperature was 59.6 degrees, about 0.5 degrees less than normal.

July was cooler, drier, sunnier and less windy than normal.

'Way-Out' Walk Streaking Home

HOUSTON (AP) — Astronaut Alfred M. Worden stepped out of the streaking Apollo 15 spacecraft nearly 200,000 miles from earth today to take man's first walk in deep space.

Bundled in a stiff pressure suit and attached to a 25-foot lifeline, Worden eased out of the open hatch of the command ship Endeavour for a hand-over-hand trip about 15 feet to an equipment bay at the rear of the spacecraft to retrieve two film canisters.

The canisters contain nearly two miles of film covering nearly 20 per cent of the lunar surface, including what are expected to be the best pictures yet of the hidden backside.

With the hatch open, David R. Scott and James B. Irwin also wore pressure suits as protection against the vacuum of space. Irwin was to emerge partially from the spacecraft to assist Worden.

The TV was turned on for the spacewalk.

"Roger, I'm enjoying it," Worden said after slipping into the void about 197,000 miles from earth and 48,000 miles from the moon, with Endeavour zipping along at more than 2,000 miles an hour.

MOVED CLUMSILY

The television picture showed the spacewalker moving rather clumsily at first toward the camera bay.

As he accustomed himself to the strange, eerie environment, he spun around easily in his weightless world.

"I'm in the foot restraint," Worden said as he gained a foothold at the side of the craft.

Worden first removed a 72-pound film cassette from a panoramic camera and moved back along the handrails to hand it to Irwin.

Then he floated back to the bay to extract a 72-pound cassette from a smaller mapping camera.

On the second trip back, he inspected a camera sensor and an experiment boom which had been giving the astronauts some trouble.

"The mass spectrometre is not quite in the cover," he reported.

$175 Damage In Car Fire

A lighted cigarette is the suspected cause of a fire which resulted in $175 damage to a Daily Colonist employee's car, police said today.

The fire broke out Wednesday as the vehicle, owned by John T. Jones, 3340 Ralston Crescent, was parked in the company's lot behind the Victoria Press Ltd. building.

A fire department spokesman said other employees first noticed the fire. Firemen were called about 4:25 p.m.

The Neighbors

A SOLID, PRACTICAL BENEfit evolving from Mr. Trudeau's conclusion last May of a protocol on consultations with Soviet Russia may be seen in yesterday's Moscow report of a new agreement on Arctic research between the two countries. Northern Development Minister Chretien, who has just completed an extensive visit to Siberia, announced the agreement for co-operation in a number of phases of Arctic development, and held out the prospect of future joint Arctic expeditions.

In a world where international nuclear disarmament talks are accompanied by nuclear tests and new armament by the participants, the new proposals for civil co-operation with Russia in the Far North are a refreshing change. No one will be naive enough to think that this relatively minor advance in international relations is going to influence the immediate global outlook very much. But in spirit and intent it is a very important step forward, for it recognizes the common cause of mankind in dealing with problems of nature regardless of political or ideological slant, and makes a practical application of sentiments which so often never get beyond the grandiloquent phrases of diplomatic interchange.

It is one of the small manifestations of good neighborliness which in their eventual total will form the background for the larger agreements which may usher in a more sensible era of human relations.

On the practical plane, Mr. Chretien reports that the Russians have made progress in developing installations such as pipelines and hydro-electric dams on permafrost — the icy under-layer which covers much of the Arctic regions and presents a problem for constructions which through heat or exposure may melt the frozen earth. Since Canada's Arctic development, except for preliminary bites, still lies ahead, there is much of value to industry and to environmental protection which may be learned from the Soviet experience.

Early this year Industry Minister Pepin concluded an agreement with the Russians for co-operative working groups in the fields of forestry, oil, non-ferrous metals and electrical power. With these joint studies, Mr. Chretien now looks for similar co-operation in far northern dam and pipeline construction techniques, as well as possibly in education, Arctic research and transportation.

Canada, of course, will be a contributor as well as a receiver in these exchanges. In particular this country has much to offer in mechanical equipment and construction methods. An admirable advance has been made in relations between Canada and the Soviet Union, and the benefits may not be confined merely to the two participants.

No Room for Complacency

REPORTS FROM WASHINGTON of the shooting from helicopters of 570 protected eagles over a sheep ranch in Wyoming in the last year have brought a reassuring statement from British Columbia's fish and wildlife branch. Its field staff, a spokesman says, is reasonably satisfied with the manner in which protected species are treated by the public in this province.

All birds but crows, magpies, Japanese and European starlings and English sparrows are protected by law in varying degrees in British Columbia. Few violations are reported and then usually by boys inadequately instructed in the use of guns.

In this respect, the province enjoys an advantage over the United States in preservation of its wildlife. We have had the opportunity to profit from the mistakes made earlier by our neighbors to the south, and the population is much smaller here.

British Columbians and other Canadians have not, however, any grounds for complacency. The story of the disappearing buffalo, of the wood pigeon and other once familiar creatures is more graphic in the United States than here, but we have made our own contributions to the serious depletion of valued wildlife — sea otters and fur seals among them — and man-made pollution continues to take its toll of wildlife.

Prophecy and Present

A FASHION FOR NOSTALGIA in the United States has led to reprinting of old features in a revived "Liberty" magazine. For those who equate nostalgia with comforting daydreams the magazine is not uniformly pleasant. The past had its horrors, and one of the most frightening aspects of reviewing the past is dredging up old prophecies which have come true or are in process of coming true.

A past master at prophecy was H. G. Wells, who swept across the literary sky like a disturbing comet with his novels, histories, expositions and scientific romances. He could not resist the temptation to look ahead because he wanted to shock man by warning of the probable outcome of his tendency to mental and social indolence. Writing in 1931 in "Liberty" Mr. Wells said: "To me — to put it plainly — it is as if I was watching a dark curtain fall steadily, fold after fold, across the bright spectacle of hope with which the century dawned."

He held out hope that there would be an "adequate renascence of human courage and creativeness," but already the pessimism which was to cast him into permanent gloom was taking hold of him. It is as if Mr. Wells knew his humanist hopes would be dashed, that man's instinctive nature would win out. And he was writing in the midst of the Depression, before the Second World War and the advent of atomic weapons.

Those who seek the opiate of forgetfulness and escape from today's prospects will not be entirely successful even in the pages of a revived magazine ostensibly devoted to those purposes.

Not So 'Dulce et Decorum'

THE CONVENTIONAL IMAGE of the young Israeli has been that of a lean, wiry, dedicated young man pledged to defend with his life his new country, and to repel with any weapon efforts to push his people into the sea. The image may be valid.

A new characteristic has been added, however, by the account of four young Israelis who have sent back their draft notices with the statement that they "are not born free in order to become oppressors and oppression is not a good reason to die." They are not ready to serve in an occupying army and they consider government policy which would use young people's lives for that purpose to be entirely cynical.

Here, once more, is young rebellion against the old concept that the older men make wars, the young men fight them—and die in them for causes in which they may not believe.

This is not necessarily a negation of the attitude shown by those who fight to preserve their country. It is, on the other hand, a rejection of the old jingoistic slogan, "theirs not to reason why".

Tactics Change, But Not the Principles

CHINA'S attitudes and tactics toward the United States are obviously changing, but her strategy and principles remain the same. This is the main impression of a reporter here. Eleven years ago, Chou En-lai told Edgar Snow, the American journalist: "We believe that a solution to Sino-U.S. relations will ultimately be found, it is only a question of time. But there is one point: If the United States does not give up its policy of aggression and the threat of war against China, no solution is possible. We do not believe that the people of the United States will allow their Government indefinitely to pursue such a policy. There is no conflict of basic interest between the peoples of China and the United States, and friendship will eventually prevail."

Reston

Now, while Chairman Mao Tse-tung is making a philosophy of history, it is Chou-En-lai who is making history itself, and what he told Snow in 1960 is very similar to what the Western diplomats here believe he told Henry Kissinger here the other day:

Agreement on principle between Washington and Peking must be reached first before concrete issues can be settled, and these principles, as China sees them, are as follows:

Peking Conditions

First, there are not "two Chinas," but one Chinese Government over both the mainland and Taiwan, here in Peking.

Second, all disputes between China and the United States, including the dispute over Taiwan, must be settled through peaceful negotiations, without the threat or use of force.

Third, accordingly, Washington must agree to withdraw its armed forces from Taiwan and the Taiwan straits. As to when and how these forces are to be withdrawn, these are matters to be settled by subsequent negotiation.

It is assumed in the Western diplomatic community in Peking that Mr. Kissinger was authorized to give assurances to Chou En-lai that President Nixon accepted these principles, and further assure him that it was the policy of the U.S. Government to withdraw all its armed forces from Vietnam.

Otherwise, diplomats here say, Chou En-lai would not have been authorized to invite President Nixon to come to Peking in opposition to strong feelings within the high command of the Chinese Army that no negotiations should take place with Washington so long as American forces remained on Taiwan.

No Easy Exercise

Convincing Chou En-lai of the seriousness of Washington's desire to normalize relations with Peking has not been an easy exercise. Early in the Nixon Administration the French Ambassador in Peking, Etienne Manoel Manach, was instructed by President de Gaulle to tell Chou En-lai that Mr. Nixon had told de Gaulle that he intended to withdraw from Vietnam and re-establish diplomatic relations with China, but the Chinese Premier was not at that time convinced.

Since then, however, President Nixon has been faithful to the policy he outlined to de Gaulle. He cancelled most of Washington's restrictions against trade, travel, and cultural exchanges with China. He resumed diplomatic talks with Peking's representatives in Warsaw in 1970, and after Mao Tse-tung indicated to Snow that he would welcome personal talks with the President, Mr. Nixon has kept pressing for a summit conference, finally through the Kissinger mission.

For this, Mr. Nixon has been generously praised in the Western diplomatic community in Peking, but now that his visit here has been arranged, even the diplomats who are most enthusiastic about his initiative are asking: Is he really prepared to pay the price?

Does he know that China will make absolutely no concessions on Taiwan to get into the United Nations, make no compromises for a peace settlement in Vietnam, and oppose violently Mr. Nixon's policy of increasing Japan's military role in the defence of the Pacific?

In short, the question being asked by Western diplomats here is what Mr. Nixon hopes to get out of all this except a relaxation of tension as an argument for re-election.

For the judgment of well-informed men in Peking is that China is changing its attitudes and tactics here, not because it needs Washington's support in its quarrels with Moscow, but because it wants Taiwan and Taiwan's seat in the United Nations.

Officials here are still cautious and even sceptical about what Mr. Nixon will do in the debate in New York about bringing Peking into the United Nations. They are hoping for private talks with Washington about their basic principles on Taiwan, Vietnam and Japan before President Nixon gets here. For they still cannot quite believe Mr. Nixon is ready to meet their terms for China's representation in the U.N., and the "normalization of relations." And they insist that Washington must get out of Vietnam and out of Taiwan before there can be any normal diplomatic relations between the two countries.

FROM WASHINGTON — By WILLIAM V. SHANNON

Story of 'The Troubles'

IRELAND was the first British Colony and the first to break free. When the British gave independence to Southern Ireland in 1922, after four years of terrorism and guerrilla warfare, they started down the long road of imperial withdrawal which was to wind through India, Palestine, Kenya, and Cyprus.

Now, a half-century later, Britain again finds itself entangled in Ireland deploying thousands of troops, hunting down rebels, and trying to find a compromise for the insoluble.

As in every other colonial situation, the logic of history as shown in the trend of political events and attitudes points inexorably in one direction — toward total British withdrawal. The remaining Protestant settlers will have to make their own terms with the Catholic natives.

There is no way that the British can alter the history and sociology of the six counties of Northern Ireland and make them into a viable, peaceful corner of Britain. They are Irish and there will be no lasting settlement until they are reunited with the rest of Ireland.

Unnatural

A quasi-independent Northern Ireland has always been a creature of artifice, not a natural entity. Geographically, historically, culturally, Ulster — to use Northern Ireland's ancient name — is as much an integral part of Ireland as New England is of the United States.

Autonomy for Northern Ireland which was part of the 1922 settlement could only have worked if the Protestant ruling faction had shown magnanimity and imagination toward the one-third of the population which is Catholic. Those qualities were not forthcoming.

Most Americans, accustomed to thinking of British fairness and the excellence of British law, assumed that the Catholics suffered nothing more in Ulster than mild social discrimination. The realities were much more bleak and oppressive.

While the rest of Britain, weary of Irish quarrels, resolutely turned its mind to other things, the ruling clique in Northern Ireland systematically discriminated against Catholics in the allocation of public housing, the administration of social services and in police work. During the depression of 1932, a leading Northern Ireland politician publicly urged employers to hire "good Protestant lads and lassies." The city of Londonderry, which has a Catholic majority, was gerry-mandered to produce a Protestant-controlled city government.

The violence of the last three years was the inevitable result of this drab tyranny.

As usually happens when an unjust equilibrium begins to shift, each concession to the rebels whets the appetite for change. Every reform short of total surrender seems too little or too late. Now the Catholic members have withdrawn from the Northern Ireland Parliament entirely, and the popular mood of the Catholics is clearly to settle for nothing less than reunion with the south.

Two years ago when British troops were first sent to Ulster, Peregrine Worsthorne wrote in the London Sunday Telegraph: "But how many of us, truth to tell, care or feel genuinely involved? It is part of a make-believe world to pretend that Ulster, in any meaningful sense, is part of the United Kingdom. We do not feel its agony, share its sentiments, understand its history, suffer its tearing rages.

"Imagine what would be happening today if rioting and insurrection were taking place on a comparable scale in some area of Britain itself. Is it conceivable that Parliament would stay in recess or the Monarch on holiday? There would be anxious crowds in Downing Street and around the palace. The national atmosphere would be fundamentally different — as different as death in the family is from death down the street."

Worsthorne warned that only the Irish could settle their own quarrel.

"We can no more do it for them than for the Indians and Pakistanis, the Israelis and the Arabs, the Cypriot Turks and the Greeks . . ."

'Summit' Talks

What Worsthorne, a leading Conservative commentator, wrote then is now being taken up across the British press. John Whale writing in the politically independent Sunday Times has urged a constitution conference bringing together the governments of London, Belfast, and Dublin to negotiate the terms of Irish reunification.

In the left-wing New Statesman, Paul Johnson wrote: "In Ireland, over the centuries, we have tried every possible formula: direct rule, indirect rule, genocide, apartheid, puppet parliaments, real parliaments, martial law, civil law, colonization, land reform, partition. Nothing has worked, the only solution we have not tried is absolute and unconditional withdrawal . . . it is time the crutch of British 'peace keeping' was removed and the Irish forced to come of age."

What the journalists are writing today will be the policy of the British government tomorrow. And sooner rather than later.

Forget the Long-hairs

Re: Alderman Baird's remarks about the so called "hippies" in the square. First, please let me state that all long-hairs are not hippies and all are not dirty, but those who like to down-grade the youth of today put them all together. May I state that there are many dirty short hairs in places of business, but that's different, isn't it? These people offend with B.O., it makes one's eyes water worse than peeling onions. Do these critics of long hair recall that Christ was a long hair, wore sandals and had dirty feet? My suggestion would be that Alderman Baird and others who criticize, turn their attention to our disgraceful sewage system. Victoria has twice the number of infectious hepatitis cases of other cities her size because of it.

My hat is off to Mr. Philip Holmes for his desire to drop this "Little Old England," bit. Let it suffice to say we are different. There are too many here who try to live apart from the rest of Canada, then when things do not come the way of British Columbia they are annoyed, and this is especially true of Victoria. Just because we have the name we do not have to be "Victorian," and the word "Old" in some cases carries a peculiar odor.

So let's get busy with the important things and forget the people in the square. They are at least minding their own business. — Mrs. E. M. Morgan, 2233 Bowker.

Usurping Power

I wish to make a strong protest against Mr. Loffmark's ill-considered and even reprehensible action in usurping such dictatorial power over our medical profession. This action was apparently taken by him and sanctioned by Mr. Bennett and his Cabinet with no consultation with the House. Such precipitate action may be necessary in dire emergency but in this case it was not of such urgency and belies the concept of democratic rule by the people for the people. The potential of such sweeping legislation poses an incredible threat to the freedom and trained judgment of our doctors. It also causes much perturbation and even distress among the populace generally.

Granted there are rural areas lacking adequate medical care. Surely collaboration between Mr. Loffmark and our medical societies could have found a solution to this problem by more gentle and acceptable means. Such a solution would have left a large majority of our population with a much higher regard for the concern felt by our government for the well-being of all persons involved. — (Mrs.) Doris M. Steward, 4925 Prospect Lake.

Losing Character

In too many areas in Canada spoliation goes on in the name of progress. Could we not at least keep what we've got in Victoria?

I take the view that all scheduled demolitions, especially of old houses, should be publicly advertised well ahead of time both in the press and inside or outside City Hall.

This would result in the public being informed of both city and business intentions, and give the people an opportunity to examine what was to be destroyed.

A record could be made via sketching or photography and, if need be, raise a protest.

Vintage Victoria is disappearing before our very eyes. Developers are hustling their work in face of an awakening public conscience.

There is not a moment to lose and council should enact a bylaw to this end forthwith. — H. H. Bridge, 3904 Shelbourne.

Roaring Planes

Regarding your editorial "We Worried About Silent Spring" in the Times of July 20 last.

Yes, "it is time to interfere with the roaring, throbbing affluent." What justification can anyone conjure up for pleasure-flying at a cost of $15 or $25 for 25 minutes to see Greater Victoria by air.

No considerate person seeks to interfere with another's pleasure, nor interfere or hinder another's gainful enterprise, provided — and this is the important point — such action does not injure others. Do the operators of these planes over the city of Victoria need these minimum fares regardless of the injurious effect on a large number of persons? Do the pleasure-seekers need to have a fleeting glance of Victoria from a few hundred feet above the city when a much more comprehensible view could be seen from a bus or car for less money?

Residents living in the James Bay area are often startled and disturbed by planes leaving the harbor with ear-splitting roars before 8 o'clock in the morning and conversation is quite impossible many times during the day. Must the residents go on enduring this thoughtless, needless, rising crescendo of noise-pollution or must they seek residence in a less noisy city than Victoria?—"Victim."

60 Years Ago

From the Times of August 5, 1911

As forecasted in the Times yesterday the contract for the construction of the Ross Bay sea wall was awarded last night to Thomas Stedham, who put in the lowest bid on the plans and specifications as drawn by Cecil B. Case, the English engineer. Stedham, who was formerly a member of the Pacific Coast Construction Company, which is at present building the Dallas Road sea wall, figured on the contract at the exceedingly low figure of $69,301.

Radicals Need More Than Mouth

By ISRAEL SHENKER

NEW YORK — Saul Alinsky is a perpetual-emotion machine inveighing against opponents and churning against allies faint of heart.

He has organized neighborhoods to fight city hall, blacks to demand their economic rights, and migrant workers to win union recognition. He has won the gratitude of many, and the enmity of many more who oppose his radical solutions.

But still he dreams, as he said in a recent interview, of training organizers fashioned in his own image — "People who can sit own with the Canadian Indians on Monday night, help the Chicanos in the Southwest on Tuesday, be in a blue-collar suburb in Chicago on Wednesday, spend Thursday with white steelworkers in Pittsburgh, move Friday to a black ghetto, and be perfectly happy rolling, organizing."

When he views the organizer-trainees who come to his Industrial Aregas Foundation training Insfitute in Chicago, his dream dissolves.

The usually lack the soaring imagination he demands; they adapt to new situations poorly, their sense of humor is pallid, and life has provided them with what he calls undigested happenings rather than experience.

* * *

Although he is not a great believer in textbooks, he has just digested his own happenings into Rules For Radicals, published by Random House.

The original training period for organizers was 5 months, but now it is down to four — since it seemed more effective for trainees to get more experience on the job. The choice facing trainees some times appears to be simple: drop out or get dropped out.

"I had assumed, and I always wanted to believe, that once mass organization was set up there'd be a fallout, and people would start organizing elsewhere," he said. "But you have to have that outside organizer. He's the sperm.

"There can be no immaculate conception of organization, there isn't any shortcut. You call a national conference and people show up who don't represent anybody, and they make militant with the mouth."

When he talks to students, he tries to get them moving. "I say to these kids, 'Stop looking for somebody with charisma. Get busy and start organizing. Make it a full-time job — which is more than the politicians are doing.'

* * *

"These kids are not going for a revolution," he complained. "The one thing you have to be able to do is communicate, but they refuse to use the skills of their own middle-class background. It's a wonder they don't insist on reinventing the wheel because it came out of a bourgeois, decadent society.

"I've run into more senility among the 19- and 20-year olds than among the aged," insisted Mr. Alinsky, who is 61. "Life is too much for them, so they jimp off into a mystical future. They have a penchant for picking losers.

"Che Guevara — what the hell did he do except get himself shot? Mao's Red Book, in this cybernetic, automated, technological, jet-propelled modern civilization, is about as germane as running a stagecoach to Kennedy Airport."

He is just as critical of the Black Panthers.

"When the Panthers began I found myself quite sympathetic," he said. "But what's wrong or right about them is academic now. The moment Huey Newton glorified the shooting in Marin County Courthouse they blew it. I think the Panthers are asking for it.

"A guy has to be a political idiot to say all power comes out of the barrel of a gun when the other side has the guns." Mr. Alinsky said. "A lot of their rhetoric has become a bore. You start saying 'White-fascistracistpig' and people turn off.

"Here's Newton saying he can't get justice in an American court, and all the time he's saying that he's out on reversal by a Superior Court. The Panthers will still get a bubble of publicity, but their days are numbered."

He still dreams of organizing blacks as well as whites.

"But black separatism and chauvinism are so strong today that there isn't anything whites can do except privately, behind the scenes," he said. "Even in my own case, despite my record, a white skin disqualified me."

That leaves him with whites, and here, too, his foraging for allies goes slowly. He used to insist that issues had to be polarized to get action — and this led him to light liberals, people he scorned as the kind who defined a position and then said, "but on the other hand . . ."

"Today my reaction is that we need liberals to help organize the middle-class sectors," he said. "So I've stopped being critical."

"But on the other hand . . ." he added, smiling.

U.K. Wrestles Old Problem Of How to Define Obscenity

By ALFRED FRIENDLY

LONDON — The British courts have recently handed down two more convictions of publications determined to be obscene. But in doing so they have contributed little if anything to clarifying the persistently knotty ambiguities, both legal and social, of that centuries-old question of what is obscene.

The outcome is another repitition of that tired truism that obscenity lies in the eye of the beholder. It is not very helpful for defining present law or writing new law.

In the first case, decided July 2, a magistrate fined a young publisher $120 for possession of 1,138 copies of "The Little Red School Book", a mini-book assertedly translated from the Scandinavian. Purportedly a primer on sex, drugs and how-to-make-life-sheer-hell-for-the-authorities, it was aimed at an 11-to-16-year old audience.

Pious Statement

The director of public prosecutions, appearing before a magistrate's court, alleged that the book went "very close to incitement to commit offenses in breach of the Sexual Offenses Act." After all, he noted, the booklet contained the publisher's pious statement of purpose: "We hope that this book will show you some of the ways in which you could influence your own lives," and indeed it does.

Be that as it may, the magistrate found it in violation of Britain's obscenity laws.

The second case, decided by a jury vote of 10-to-1 (nonunanimous verdicts are operative under a relatively new British law), had to do with the so-called "schoolkids issue" of Oz magazine, a raffish and iconoclastic periodical which conceives itself as a thorn in the side of the body politic.

The charges against its three long-haired editors were conspiring to corrupt morals and publishing, distributing and possessing an obscene article. The jury refused to convict on the first count, but ruled guilty on the others.

The evidence on conspiring was meager, and that Oz's contents would corrupt — as distinct from offend or nauseate — is doubtful.

But if obscene means what the judge gave as the dictionary definition — "repulsive, loathesome and lewd" — then by conventional standards the jury perhaps had no choice but to find Oz obscene.

The rub comes in the concept of "conventional standards." One generation's are not another's. In a predictable denunciation of the verdict, the National Council for Civil Liberties alluded to that point:

"There is a calculated attempt being made to suppress opinions and attitudes, particularly those of the young, that conflict with the rigid morality of an elderly establishment," it said.

Maybe the question is, are the attitudes and opinions of the young a proper concern of the elderly? Or are they none of its business? The issue of Oz that was found obscene was avowedly directed to school children.

The judge, at least, thought the fact germane. Quoting scripture (Matthew 18:6, to be precise), he said:

"But whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged around his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea."

At this writing the three editors are in jail, awaiting sentence. The one cited by the judge is not authorized under British law.

Richard Handyside, 27-year-old publisher of "The Little Red Schoolbook," has announced he will appeal the verdict. Meantime, the 3½ by 5 inch booklet is once again on sale, with the 26 offending pages on sex torn out. Before the legal action, some 17,000 had been sold, and were being gleefully passed hand-to-hand among high school kids; Handyside seems to have planned a further printing of 30,000 copies.

It is hard to disagree with the convicting magistrate's judgement that in publishing the translation Handyside's motives had not been "entirely philanthropic" and that he had to put it out simply because of his "love for children."

But there is room for doubting his finding that the booklet is "obscene." The passages on sex may well be immoral, (if encouragement of teenage promiscuity is minor) but they are certainly not salacious or erotic. They are simply explicit and bluntly crude, with all of the four-letter words.

Like Football

What is wrong with the section, in my own prudish view, is not the explicitness or the straightforward "sex education" descriptions but — because of the absence of any suggestion to the contrary — the unmistakable message it carries that school kids should engage in the pursuit of fornication with all the eagerness and in the same insouciant frame of mind in which they go out for football or milkshakes.

A few passages give the tone. They follow, with no gloss from me, lily-gilding not being necessary:

● "There ought to be one or several contraceptive machines in every school. If your school refuses to install one, get together with some friends and start your own contraceptive shop."

● "(Veneral disease) can be irritating but it's not usually serious and can always be cured."

● "Porn(ography) is a harmless pleasure if it isn't taken seriously and believed to be real life . . . but it's quite possible that you may get some good ideas from it and you may find something which looks interesting and that you haven't tried before."

If the prevailing wisdom is that the only danger to high school sex is unwanted pregnancy and that there are no other drawbacks such as, for example, the risk of psychological trauma, especially to a teen-age girl; and if high school sex should indeed be considered without thought of love and feeling, then I suppose there is nothing basically wrong with that part of the book.

Nasty Product

There is certainly nothing else in the publication that could be, or in my opinion should be, censored in any free society. But that is different from judging it laudable.

For myself, I find it a thoroughly nasty product, a sly little bit of social perversion, aimed at creating little new lefties from the age of 11 by convincing them that all their small childhood grievances are really the fault of a wicked society, authoritarian parents and conspiratorial capitalists who have contrived school as a device for maintaining the evil status quo.

The book is a collection of advice about how a child should set out to get the ups of his parents and his teachers, by agitation, complaint, demonstrations, boycotts and strikes.

Ronald Butt of The London Times writes that, in fact, advocates of The Little Red School Book really advocate robbing children of the magic of childhood. "What is at stake is not a child's freedom, but the freedom to be a child."

From the liberal, not to say left, side of the political spectrum, Paul Johnson, former editor of the New Statesman, comes to the same conclusion.

"Do children wish to embrace the acrimonious adult world quite so quickly and quite so completely? There is agony in childhood but also a certain magic, which we learn to value only when it has gone forever, all too soon. It has nothing to do with sex, or abstract rights, but a great deal to do with poetry. It does not easily flourish in an atmosphere of polemics and manifestos."

We turn now — if you're still with us — to the school kids' issue of Oz, a so-called "underground" magazine.

It is hard to see how the issue could, as charged, "debauch and corrupt the morals of children . . . or implant in their minds lustful and perverted desires" by its "obscene, lewd, indecent and sexually perverted articles, cartoons, drawings and illustrations."

Indecent the illustrations certainly are, by any conceivable definition of indecency — so indecent, indeed, that they surely cannot be described, much less reproduced in a general circulation newspaper.

Disgusting, I would contend, but anything but arousing. While dozens of porn shops flourish in Soho and openly sell in the front rooms (not even in the quasi-secret backrooms, where the really tough stuff is to be had) photographs and books that are a hundred times more salacious and stimulating than these coarse representations, it would seem absurd to convict Oz.

The fact of the matter is that Oz, and its school kids issue, is part and parcel of a publication vogue that depends on shock to excuse and disguise the absence of any valid creative artistic or intellectual content.

Writing On Wall

The merits, such as they are, of organization, care, discipline, coherence, originality and substantive content in writing or graphics are forgotten in favor of the thrill of the big bad boy who writes a dirty word in crude orthography on the schoolhouse wall.

Over the years, some classic pornography was beautifully written and splendidly illustrated. But the writing, drawings and make-up of Oz are beyond belief execrable, even in the simplest technique. They would have been recognized as unacceptably incompetent by me and my provincial high school roue society 45 years ago.

Oz need not be legally censored. It and its like can be counted on to die of anemia of talent.

Masters of Disillusion

By ANTHONY LEWIS

LONDON — Lyndon Johnson and Harold Wilson could hardly be more different in background and personality — a flamboyant Texan larger than life, a cautious pipe-smoking Yorkshireman. But their years of political power were alike in one profoundly depressing sense. Both created deep disillusionment among the naturally optimistic reformist elements in their societies.

Lyndon Johnson was beyond doubt a genuine populist, a man who cared about the poor and the rejected in society, an egalitarian reformer. He had great political experience, a shrewd intelligence, tremendous energy. What went wrong?

The faults were faults of character. For one, he was obsessed with himself. His standard of judgment on the state of the nation too often seemed to be the polls he carried in his pocket on the public's opinion of Lyndon Johnson. He identified the Democratic party's fate, or even the country's, with his own.

He was temperamentally unable to be candid, to be straight with his people. The credibility gap was really a gap in his psychological makeup — an inability to see that the means used by a political leader, as in taking his country into war, can be as important as the end.

Then he was a victim of his own tendency to exaggeration. When he promised a war against poverty, a war without quarter until victory, it was corruptingly disappointing for the poor and their supporters to find that there was no plan of battle.

For all these reasons, history is likely to agree with Walter Lippmann's judgment that Johnson was one of the most disastrous of American presidents.

That is a hard thing to say about a man sincerely devoted to the betterment of his people. But it is true nonetheless, for the way he exercised power aroused a terrible cynicism about the possibility of changing our society through the political process. He wounded the hope of reform, encouraging despair on the one hand and extra-political protest and violence on the other.

Harold Wilson similarly is a man of sincere humanity, concerned about the welfare of ordinary people. But his case shows that sincerity is not enough in a politician who is able to persuade himself that everything is as he wishes it to be.

Wilson's obsession is with his treatment in the press. His book on the 1964-70 Labor government, just published, is so overwhelmingly concerned with what newspapers and television said about him that one respected reviewer, Peter Jenkins, said Wilson had come close to defining the prime minister as chief public relations officer.

Sincere Doubletalk

Candor is alien to his nature. It is not just his insistence that there is nothing inconsistent about endorsing British entry into the Common Market one year and condemning it the next — a stance that has even anti-Marketeers embarrassed. With equal sincerity, he said the fate of his government depended on the passage of a union reform bill — then withdrew it and, later, excoriated the Conservative government for pushing similar legislation.

The gulf between promise and performance has had souring effects in Wilson's case as in Johnson's. He took office as a man of the left, expected to apply "socialist principles" to the problems of a post-imperial Britain.

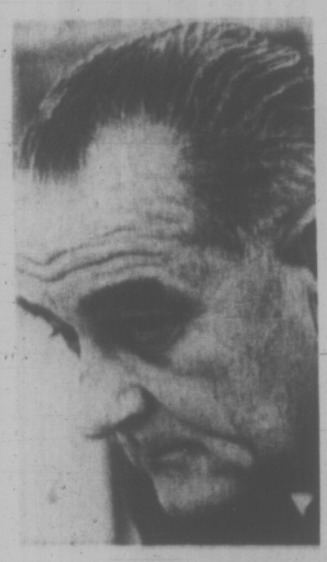
Instead he chased such fantasies as a role for Britain at the "top tables" of world diplomacy — his phrase. He turned out to have no philosophy except to balance off the contending forces in the Labor party. He was all tactics, no strategy.

The publication of Wilson's book, coming on top of his Common Market reversal, has brought a searching and often cruel examination of his politics. Interestingly, some of the most pained comments have come from critics on the left, concerned that the Wilson recipe of formless "pragmatism" has alienated people from politics.

One critic, Paul Foot, wrote that the Wilson years had sent the idealism of ordinary Labor supporters into an "apparently irreversible decline."

The Johnson and Wilson years may show, in retrospect, that the public in a democracy looks as much for character in its leaders as for ideology. The test is not consistency, which is neither possible nor desirable in a politician. It is a kind of honor.

There was a touching moment in the House of Lords debate over the Common Market that made the point. Lady Gaitskell, widow of the Labor party's leader before Harold Wilson, was speaking.



JOHNSON

Hugh Gaitskell made a memorable speech in 1962 against British membership in the Common Market. But he is still loved by devoted Marketeers, among others, because he was a big man, a man of insight and imagination and courage.

Time Not Still

Now Lady Gaitskell was giving her position on Britain and the Market. "Time has not stood still in the past decade," she said. "I do not often indulge in thinking about what might have been had my husband lived," but she believed he would now have said yes. The House murmured its approval.

There are never many Hugh Gaitskells in a democracy, men of the left with those special qualities of leadership. They are not even guaranteed to succeed, politically: Gaitskell never led his party to office. But without them the system decays. Expediency is not enough.

SQUAMISH, HYDRO SQUARE FOR FIGHT

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Hydro will drop defoliant pellets on its right of way within the Squamish borders, despite threats of Mayor Pat Brennan to impound its helicopter.

Hydro Chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum declined Wednesday to comment on the impoundment possibility, stating:

"I don't want to heat up the controversy. This program was authorized by the directors. It was supposed to go ahead Tuesday. I haven't any late information on where they are spreading pellets at present. There are no restrictions (as a result of the controversy).

"We will be doing our right of way there. If it hasn't been done already, it will be."

Asked if Hydro would take out the necessary permit, Shrum said no. He said the pellets are harmless to humans and animals and said Brennan was told so.

Brennan said he would charge B.C. Hydro in court the minute a helicopter dropped defoliant pellets within Squamish municipal boundaries.

Squamish passed a bylaw in August, 1970, requiring all commercial spraying operations to apply for a free permit before being allowed to spray.

STRONGER POWERS NEEDED

Tories Urge Federal Pollution War

OTTAWA (CP) — The Conservative party's policy advisory committee suggests that the federal government be given greater constitutional authority to fight pollution.

The committee Wednesday issued a policy paper on the environment which will be the basis for discussion among party members. It says that Canada would "benefit greatly" if the federal government had stronger powers to set national standards of environmental quality.

"While the party favors a greater degree of decentralization of constitutional authority in a number of specific areas of public policy, it believes that the Canadian government should actively explore with the provinces the possibility and desirability of a transferral of some constitutional power relating to the environment."

The transfer to the federal government, says the paper, would "enable the development of a stronger national approach to combatting and controlling pollution."

The paper said an effective national program of pollution control should begin with complete information about the present deterioration of the environment. There should also be a comprehensive inventory of the country's natural resources.

It suggests the formation of an environmental council of Canada, similar to the Science Council of Canada, to advise the government on all aspects of environmental matters. Crown corporations should be established to deal with specific pollution problems.

Another recommendation was that a manpower training program be started "to ensure that Canadians are equipped and trained to undertake effective detection of environmental problems."

"A Canadian Water Code should be established, in partnership with the provinces, to ensure adequate supplies of fresh water."

The paper says the government has done "practically nothing" to reduce the amount of phosphorous material being discharged into fresh waters by municipalities and industries.

People. A guaranteed investment.

The history of Canada was written by generations of tough, self-reliant people who came here with the same determination to build something worthwhile.
Think of the incredible difficulties that faced the immigrants who first settled here. Read about the Canadians who literally forged this country together a hundred years ago, in mile after impossible mile of railroad track. And remember the challenge of Expo '67. How many people even dreamed that Canadians could put on the greatest show the world has ever seen?
People like that are still the most important resource we have. Unemployment is a waste of that resource — a waste that affects every one of us, at every income level.
If we can find enough confidence in ourselves to grow the jobs we need, we'll all be better off for it. As a nation, we'll be producing more and selling more.
As individuals, we'll be earning more and buying more.
Something else. When we give people a chance to build — a chance to fulfill themselves — we also give them pride and a sense of achievement.
And those are gifts too valuable to be measured in dollars and cents.

Government policies and programmes can create a climate for growth.
But Governments can't legislate public confidence.
Nor can they control the private initiative and enterprise which will finally determine how far and how fast Canada grows.
That's up to individual Canadians.

What are our chances?

Most economists agree that Canada is beginning a new period of growth.
In the past year, we've contained inflation more successfully than any other country with a free economy.
Things are moving.
Companies are expanding. Opportunities are opening up.
But we can still do much better. How much better depends on all of us; on how much we want to succeed.
We have the people. We have the skills. Now we'll find out if we also have what it takes to make use of them.

What Canada Manpower Centres can do.

Canada Manpower is the operating arm of the Department of Manpower and Immigration, responsible for the development and utilization of our human resources.
In other words, their business is matching people with job opportunities. Last year, for example, they helped more than 700,000 Canadians find work.
There are 390 Canada Manpower Centres across the country, all linked by Telex so that they work together as one cohesive force.
They can arrange the training and retraining of workers and help them relocate in opportunity areas. They also have access to the researchers, the economists and the statisticians needed by business and industry to take full advantage of existing opportunities and to create new ones.
Canada Manpower Centres are there to help every way they can.

What Canadian businessmen can do.

Our economy depends on the enterprise and energy of the private sector to create new wealth and employment.
There has rarely been a better time (or a more urgent need) to translate that fact into meaningful action.
Now — at the beginning of an economic up-turn.
Now — when thousands of skilled people are ready and anxious to go to work.
Now — when there are Government programmes available to help with all kinds of business expansion plans.
Canada's economic future is very much in your hands. The real stimulus for growth must come from your initiative and your confidence in the future of this country.

What Canadian workers can do.

If you think Canada Manpower Centres are just for unemployed people, you're wrong.
A Canada Manpower Centre is also the place to go if you're underemployed. If you're interested in learning a new trade or up-grading your present skills — the counsellors there can tell you all about Government sponsored retraining programmes. (In these days of constant technological change, they can make all the difference in the world to your future).
And if you want to find out about employment opportunities in other parts of the country — Canada Manpower is the place to get answers.
If you fit any of these categories, and haven't already registered with a Canada Manpower Centre, then do so now.

What the Canadian people can do.

Start by examining your own attitudes in the bright light of Canada's current economic prospects.
Right now, personal savings are at a ten-year high. Which simply means that people have been careful about spending — as people always are when times are difficult.
There's much less reason for that caution today.
What's needed now is the kind of confidence that will persuade people to make those expenditures they've been postponing. Because when people start spending, manufacturers will be encouraged to expand into new markets and new product areas.
That's what keeps the economy moving. And that's what grows jobs.

Have we got what it takes to grow the jobs we need?

Kaiser Grows

A new mineral exploration company to operate in B.C. has been set up by Kaiser Aluminum, of Oakland, Calif.

Kaiser Exploration and Mining Co., to have its field office in Vancouver and executive headquarters in Oakland, was incorporated in B.C. July 14.

The firm was first organized as a Delaware-based company on Sept. 24, 1969, with the objects of exploring for, mining, milling, processing and marketing all types of ores and minerals.

Kaiser Exploration, operating independently of Kaiser Resources Ltd., has the following Oakland executives as its directors: Thomas J. Ready jr., Alfred N. Warburton jr., Thomas K. McCarthy, Wallace Macgregor and William Hobbs.

MEDICARE EXPANSION URGED BY LABOR

The B.C. government should use medicare surpluses to improve benefits "especially free medicare for all old people," Victoria Labor Council delegates agreed Wednesday night.

Secretary Larry Ryan said accumulated surpluses amount to more than $42 million, but last year some paramedical benefits were cut in half.

The council agreed to call on the government to restore the full chiropractic benefit.

"The government is using medicare as a profit-oriented plan rather than a people-oriented plan," he said.

Council vice-president John Schibli urged affiliated unions to follow up the labor council's action. He said there are a lot of back ailments among construction workers and chiropractic services were both needed and useful.

The council also endorsed an earlier statement by the B.C. Federation of Labor ciriticizing the cabinet's granting of powers to Health Minister Ralph Loffmark over doctors privileges to practise in individual hospitals.

Province Names MacLean Deputy Transport Minister

Fraser MacLean, 45, has been named deupty minister of commercial transport for the provincial government.

A native of New Westminster, MacLean joined the provincial government 24 years ago and has been assistant deputy minister of highways for nine years.

Commercial Transport Minister Frank Richter said the appointment will mark a new era of imcreased liaison between his department and the highways department in the regulation of commercial trucking.

MacLean replaces A. J. Bowering, who took an early retirement from the civil service after more than 35 years' service. MacLean is married and has four children. He graduated from University of British Columbia in 1947 with a degree in mechanical engineering.

Israel Jails 3 Saboteurs

LOD, Israel (Reuter) — A military court imposed stiff prison setences today on two young Moroccan sisters and a West German convicted of smuggling sabotage materials into the country and planning to blow up hotels in Tel Aviv and Haifa.

Nadia Bashir Bardali, 26, of Morocco was sentenced to 12 years, her sister Marlene 21, to 10 years. Evelyn Barj, 21, from West Germany, was given a 14-year sentence.

The three were arrested last April as they arrived at Lod airport from France, carrying explosives, detonators and timing devices hidden on their bodies.

ALL-NEW CORTINA

Just arrived from Europe.

A lot more little car. Because we demand a lot more of it.

A lot more durability
Canada challenges a car. The all-new Cortina has been designed to meet—and beat—that challenge.
Brakes, engine, electrical system, heating system, all engineered to tackle this country's varied driving and climate conditions.
Even the finish is special. It's electro-coated to fight rust in even the most inaccessible areas.

A lot more go
A 2 litre Overhead Camshaft engine is standard. It has been skillfully modified to give you more power without increasing gas consumption. It packs a 100 horsepower.
And for those who wish less get up and go a 1600 cc OHV engine is optional.

A lot more stop
Fade resistant power front disc brakes are standard. There's minimal effort in bringing the car to a fast stop.
The rear drum brakes have no sliding cylinders or shoe anchors to go wrong. And the whole Dual Line Brake System is sealed against dirt and water.

A lot better ride
The 101.5 inch long wheelbase accounts for the smoother ride.
The front Short and Long arm Suspension plus a Stabilizer Bar provides a quieter ride and improved handling.
Rack-and-pinion steering which offers quick, precise maneuverability is standard.
At the rear the traditional leaf springs are replaced by a 4-bar link system which improves the ride.
Drive Cortina and see.

A lot more room everywhere
For a small car, Cortina gives you plenty of head, hip and leg room. This was accomplished by widening the track to 56 inches. And making the inside wider.
There's more room in the rear, and the back seat passengers sit ahead of the rear axle for a more comfortable ride.
And the trunk. 12 cubic feet with new, easier low-level loading.

A lot more comfort
Cortina gives you a higher degree of comfort than you'd expect to find on an import.
The front bucket seats are fully reclining. They have been scientifically designed to give firmer lumbar and lateral support. This fixes you firmly in the seat leaving you more relaxed. Lengthy journeys somehow seem shorter.
Instruments are located conveniently within easy reach.
The headlining is perforated for sound absorption, loop-pile carpeting fitted throughout, grab handles are for your convenience and there's even a cigarette lighter.

There's a Cortina for every need
Cortina L comes in a 2-door or 4-door version. Then there's Cortina GT. And finally a great Cortina 4-door Estate Wagon. It features 63.8 cu. ft. of storage space when the rear seat is folded down.

Service just about everywhere
Throughout Canada there are Mercury and Ford dealers ready to give you any service you may require. Each one will honour your warranty.
This might not mean much to you between home and office. But we find most people like to travel around in Cortinas. And it's nice to know we're there if you need us.
And you'll be pleased to hear Cortina is designed to run 6,000 miles between service intervals after your first check-up.

A lot more for your money
Cortina comes as a complete car. It has built-in standard features others offer as options. Like power front disc brakes, electric rear window defroster, cigarette lighter, reclining bucket seats, full carpeting and the 2 litre OHC engine.
We haven't mentioned the low price. It's right there at the bottom of this advertisement. We're proud of that, too.

All-New Cortina. A lot more little car.

Farmers Fight Worm Invasion

REGINA (CP) — The provincial government is flying in 15,000 pounds of chemicals from Texas to fight a widespread invasion of Bertha army worms, which are destroying rapeseed crops in Saskatchewan.

Agriculture Minister Jack Messer announced that the chemical, Lannate, will be made available to farmers through the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool. The plane is expected to arrive in Saskatoon late today.

Messer said the outbreak became evident last week but the limitation on the use of DDT left rapeseed growers without a clear recommendation for a satisfactory chemical for control of army worms and beet web worms in rapeseed.

Tests this year by the federal research station at Saskatoon indicated that lannate gives good control at a rate of two ounces per acre. The order from Texas is designed to treat about 110,000 acres. The cost to the farmer will be $9.75 a pound or $1.40 an acre.

A serious infestation of the beet web worm attacking rapeseed crops was also reported in central Alberta.

Dragged to Death

PUNNICHY, Sask. (CP) — A three-year-old girl was dragged to her death by a shetland pony.

Yvonne Marie Turner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Turner of the Punnichy district, 80 miles north of Regina, lost her balance and slipped from the pony she was riding. Police said she was unable to free herself because of a rope between the pony's halter and her waist.

Passes Up Book

EDMONTON (CP) — Publisher Mel Hurtig said he has passed up a book on Alberta politics by Alf Hooke, a Social Credit cabinet minister for 25 years.

The book contains criticism of the regimes of both former premier Ernest Manning and Harry Strom, the current premier who is engaged in a campaign for the Aug. 30 provincial election.

Rain, Hail Storm

MACKLIN, Sask. (CP) — A rain and hail storm, driven by 90 mph winds, flooded homes, moved buildings, flattened bumper crops and wahsed crops away in a 10-square-mile area sourrounding Macklin.

Hailstones the size of a walnut and three inches of rain fell on this east-central Saskatchewan farm community for about 90 minutes. Outside the area, nothing was disturbed.

* * *

Reduce Work Week

REGINA (CP) — A bill to lower the legal hours of work to 40 hours a week from 44 will not be proclaimed until after a review of the current minimum wage legislation, Labor Minister Gordon Snyder said in the legislature.

Snyder also said in introducing the bill for second reading that special consideration concerning the 40-hour limit will by given to employers in exceptional circumstances.

* * *

Denies Charge

CALGARY (CP) — Jay Salmon, Social Credit candidate in Calgary Foothills, said Mayor Rod Sykes will soon issue a report recommending that Salmon be removed as city solicitor.

In a prepared statement Salmon denies any impropriety, contended his property holdings are all public knowledge and said he is willing to start defamation action if necessary.

Wrong Direction

CALGARY (CP) — Government handouts are encouraging a "dependent mentality" among Indians, lawyer William Wuttunee said here.

Wuttunee, a Cree, said the federal government spent $300 million on Indians last year and the amount increases annually.

But larger efforts should be directed at intergrating them into the rest of society.

Indian cultural nationalists are hindering this absorption and are headed in the wrong direction, he said.

"Aren't the new inventions of today more exciting than the histories of yesterday?"

* * *

Just a 'Gimmick'

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — Grant Notley, provincial leader of the New Democratic Party, said Premier Harry Strom's promise to provide $1,000 grants for purchasers of homes is "just an election gimmick."

The proposal would be useful only if controls are placed on land speculators, land developers and manufacturers of mobile homes, he said. Otherwise the price of homes would be increased and the $1,000-grant would be "syphoned off," resulting in benefits to "promoters," but not to home buyers.

Press Lockout Draws Fire From Unions

MONTREAL (CP) — Guy Bellavance, spokesman of a common front of four unions representing locked-out La Presse employees, Wednesday accused the newspaper's management of insincerity when it locked out 26 photoengravers still at the bargaining table Tuesday.

Mr. Bellavance, chairman of Local 41 of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants Union at North America's largest French-language daily, said representitives of the photoengravers were awaiting a reply to counter-proposals when they were locked out.

Typographers and pressmen were locked out July 19 and mailroom personnel found their entrance to the downtown newspaper office barred a week later.

The unions representing the locked-out employees originally insisted that bargaining be done in a common front uniting the four unions involved. Management refused, claiming overlapping jurisdictions would hamper negotiations.

The unions dropped this policy last week and representatives of the unions went into separate meetings with La Presse management last Friday.

While the lockout has been in effect, management and supervisory personnel have been publishing a single edition instead of the normal three of the daily, with some of the staff of more than 1,000 filling in for the locked-out employees.

Steel Price Up

PITTSBURGH (UPI) National Steel Corp. and Jones and Laughlin — both among the "big nine" steel producers who negotiated the industry's new labor contract, have announced 8 per cent price increases.

The price change matches similar increases made by the two corporation's competitors. All the steel companies say the price increases on virtually their entire product lines are necessary to finance the three-year contract with the United Steel Workers union.

S.A. Mining Desirable

LONDON (Reuter) — South African mining issues came in for hedge buying on the stock exchange today following currency uncertainties and the setback on Wall Street.

The equity market was depressed. Leading industrials to weaken included Glaxo, ICI, Dunlop, Unilever, Courtaulds and Rank. Among engineerings, Babcocks, Guest Keen and Tubes moved lower.

Canadians were generally lower under the lead of Inco, down 1½ at 151½ on the reduced quarterly dividend and drop in earnings. Rio Tinto eased in sympathy. Dome Petroleums, Imperial Oil, Gulf, Cominco, Hollinger, Canadian Pacific and Brascan were others to decline. Consolidated Bathurst moved against the trend.

Dredging Award

Three major Canadian marine construction companies have been awarded a $21 million contract for one of Canada's largest dredging projects.

The federal department of transport has awarded the contract for deepening and widening of an 18-mile channel on the St. Lawrence Seaway north of the Isle of Orleans into Quebec City harbor from the east.

Ashland

Ashland Oil Canada Ltd. had a net income of $5.46 million during the nine months ended June 30, almost double the $2.79 million earned in the period a year earlier.

Included was a gain of $474,000 from the extraordinary sales of assets while the 1970 figures included a loss of $675,000 on a similar disposal.

Border

Border Chemical Co. Ltd. of Winnipeg has reported pre-tax earnings for the first half of 1971 of $109,677 (28.8 cents a share), compared with $76,307 (20 cents) in the six-month period ended June 30, 1970.

Good Driving Helps Louise Enjoy Tour

By ERNIE FEDORUK

There are two ways to regard some of those giant Douglas firs that dot the Royal Colwood golf course.

From a respectable distance, they're magnificent.

From close in, and when they interfere with the flight of your ball, they can be monsters.

Louise LaRochelle a pretty 18-year-old from the suburbs of Quebec City, thinks the trees are magnificent.

The first-round leader in the Canadian junior women's tournament did most of her viewing from the centre of the fairways. That made for an all-around enjoyable day.

Her 39-42—81 was the best among 77 starters in the national tournament. That's seven over par, or four — depending on which scorecard you want to follow.

Normally, ladies' par at Colwood is 37-40—77 with a course rating of 74. The Canadian Ladies' Golf Association amended the official tournament scorecard to show par as 36-38—74.

COURSE TOUGH

The change didn't bother most of the young competitors. Many found the 6,119-yard course with its narrow fairways "difficult."

That includes Miss LaRochelle, who was favorably impressed with the big trees as well as the closing three holes. She also "liked" her drives.

Generally, they sailed out about 220 yards, but the odd one nudged the 240 mark.

More impressive was Louise's accuracy.

"My drives were fantastic," she said. "They all went just about where I wanted them. That really pleased me because I have a tendency to hook."

She also liked the greens, and experienced no great putting problems.

HANDICAP FOUR

Her performance Wednesday was in keeping with recent play. She entered the nationals — at her own expense after failing to make the Quebec team — as a five handicap. Solid play in recent weeks brought it down to a four last week.

The 1970 Quebec junior champion, Louise missed making this year's team after scoring "a horrible 96" in the opening round of her provincial trials. She came back strongly, but missed by two strokes and had to pay her own way to Victoria.

Miss LaRochelle finished the day one stroke ahead of Sharon Janzen of Prince George as British Columbia and Quebec golfers dominated the opening round. Two Quebec team members — Dianne Mercure and Debbie Savoy — both shared third place after posting 85s.

But without Miss LaRochelle's total, the strong Quebec team had to settle for second place in the hunt for interprovincial team honors. The totals of Misses Mercure and Savoy gave Quebec 170, one less than British Columbia.

COUNT ONLY TWO

Only the best two scores of the three participating team members count in the team championship.

Miss Janzen's fine 42-40—82 took some of the spotlight away from teammate Carole Morrissey, the three-handicapper from Penticton who is one of the tournament favorites.

Miss Morrissey and Val White of Vancouver's Marine Drive both carded 87s.

That was enough to give B.C. the lead wifh a 169 total.

Ontario was third, 14 strokes off the pace.

The 87s by Miss Morrissey and Miss White was enough to put the B.C. girls into a five-way tie for fifth place in the individual list.

Also at 87 were Kathy Hobkirk of Vancouver Point Grey, Robyn Walton of Clarkston, Wash., and Karen Hulteng of Hayden Lake, Idaho.

Sydney Thomson of Colwood was Victoria's best performer. She carded 44-46—90. Playing off a 22 handicap, the 12-yearold was a runaway winner of the day's low net honors with a sparkling 68.

Team play was to conclude today with the final 18 holes and the individual portion of the tournament winds up Friday.

BILL WALKER

There is a sign near the first tee at Royal Colwood which says . . . "This is one of the continent's great golf courses; please treat it as such."

The words aren't famous, and the theme has been used before. But the fact remains that Colwood really hasn't changed much over the years.

It was tough when it was built in 1912-13; it was still tough when it faced bankruptcy shortly after the war; and it was tough on the girls in the Canadian Junior Amateur Championship which opened Tuesday.

And the degree of difficulty, if anything, is getting higher, because so are the trees.

That's what bothered a lot of the girls from across the Dominion. The woods gave the youngsters from the open spaces a feeling of being hemmed in.

Actually, the fairways aren't that narrow, but there is little margin for error.

An authority on pitfalls about courses in town is Marg Todd. A former multi-champion in many events, and a senior now (good heavens!), Marg, in essence, puts it this way:

"This is an honest course. You put the ball where you should, and it's like a bonus. If you don't you suffer."

The golfer who isn't straight, or whose game isn't sharp, is in trouble here. And that goes for the juniors too.

Sure, they're only girls, but they're in national competition, on a great course; and if they didn't know it earlier, they will by Friday.

●

Nobody came close to women's par, which is 77, and the nearest to the national rating of 74 that the governing committee has come up with was Louise LaRochelle of Ste. Foy, Quebec; with an 81.

Louise, a four handicapper, who missed a place on the Quebec team this year because of a bad playoff round, may do better today, and then she may not.

Because there is skepticism that the winner, or even anyone, will match par and never that peculiar national rating of 74, on either of the two remaining days. It is not fair to think they would.

In an exercise down memory lane, former secretary Derek Rhys-Jones, said as far as he knew the best ladies' score ever at Colwood was a 70 by Marlene Stewart Strait way back in 1955.

The best men's score, in comparison, and that means from the back tees, is shared by four players.

Ken Black had a 67 in the PNGA in 1948. That's the official course record and that has been tied three times in the past 23 years.

Bill McColl, who knew how to play the course almost as well as anyone, owns a share of that record. So does Wayne Volmer, now a professional. The other fellow was a visitor from South Africa. Rodney Mullan fired a 32-35 in the Canadian Amateur in 1967. He learned respect the next day with a 78.

●

So take heart, girls, don't let it unnerve you. Sydney Thomson didn't. Sydney who?

Sydney Thomson had a 90, which doesn't sound too great, until it was revealed that only 10 other girls had a better score. Besides, Sydney is only 12.

Naturally, it is the best-ever score by this 22-handicapper. "Last week in the B.C., she broke 100," said an onlooker, "and got her under-100 pin."

"She's a cool one," said pro Bill Court. "It shouldn't phase her." Actually, Sydney has been playing all of two years, and it's just a thought, but how many men at Colwood would settle for a 44-46 and remain in the clubhouse?

Hmmm?

Meanwhile, in and out of that same clubhouse there should be a tender bone of contention now, and for a few days to come, over this course rating bit.

The gals want Colwood fo change. But Colwood doesn't want to drop from 77 to 74. The gals say it can affect national handicapping if the club doesn't, which is the main reason why they have their own scorecards for the tournament.

●

The CLGA has the third hole as a par four on their national rating. The Colwood men say "no way" can their first stroke hole ever be a four for the ladies. That would be an insult.

Women's lib, in golf, is in for another setback on the same theme in regard to the 11th hole, normally a par three. In this tournament, it's a four (nationally). And loyal Colwoodians snort that the third and the 11th have that same degree of difficulty as indicated by the CLGA ruling.

There is no comparision, and the real card should show a five on the third, and a three on the 11th. That's the feeling.

And there it rests, while the best bunch of golfing gals in the land go about their business. There are some cute ones, too, and many can "smoke" that ball. But always remember this:

These are still youngsters, who are facing a monster, or as one of the leading U.S. golf professionals once said when asked to name the toughest course he ever played on.

"St. Andrew's, naturally," answered Johnny Revolta.

Nichol Upsets Top Net Seed

Seeded American players continued to dominate the British Columbia open tennis championships at the Racquet Club Wednesday.

Top-seeded Mike Mullan of Philadelphia moved up through the open men's singles with a 6-4, 7-6 victory over Kent Woodward of Denver, Colo.

On the distaff side, top-seeded Hedy Jackson of Portland eliminated one of B.C.'s remaining hopes in the tournament by defeating Taffy Savard of Vancouver 6-4, 6-0.

The only other B.C. player left in the open, Janet Hall, also of Vancouver, was eliminated as well. She was beaten 7-5, 6-3 by Evelyn Houseman of Los Angeles.

★ ★ ★

John Nichol of the Oak Bay club pulled off an upset in the junior veteran's section of the tournament by eliminating top-seeded Jim Skelton of Vancouver.

The unseeded Nichol dropped Skelton in two tie-breaker sets, 7-6, 7-6 in the contest for over 35-year-olds.

Dorothy Cheney of Santa Monica was defeated 7-6, 6-4 by Mary Delaney of San Francisco in the open women's singles. However the 53-year-old Mrs. Cheney made up for the loss later by trouncing Mary Roberts of Portland, 6-0, 6-1 in the first round of the Pacific Northwest seniors' championship, being run in conjunction with the open.

McCormick Upset

WINNIPEG (CP) — Jim Boyce of Toronto scored a upset Wednesday in men's singles at the Canadian tennis championships when he beat third-seeded former Victoria Star Don McCormick of Vancouver 6-4, 3-6, 6-1.

Boyce, 20, who won the Canadian junior crown in 1968 and 1969, won convincingly, placing steady shots in the third set after he had let his temper boil over during the second set.

Another former Victorian, Susan Butt of Vancouver, scored an upset win in women's singles as she downed fifth-seeded Inge Weber of Toronto 6-3, 6-4.

Canadians Medal Bound In Pentathlon Contest

By The Canadian Press

CALI, Colombia (CP) — Debbie Van Kiekebelt and Penny May, packing a one-two punch they uncorked early in the pentathlon, assumed the favorite's role for a gold and silver medal today as the track and field competition finishes at the Pan-American Games.

Debbie and Penny, comparative newcomers in the gruelling five-event pentathlon, shot into the lead after the first three events Wednesday. First Penny was in front and then Debbie pulled away with a brilliant five-foot 8¼-inch effort in the high jump.

Miss Van Kiekebelt, a 17-year-old Grade 12 student from Mississauga, Ont., held a 160-point lead over Miss May, a Victoria girl who is two years older than Debbie.

With the long jump and 200-metre dash still to come, Miss Van Kiekebelt earned 2,510 points for her showing in the 100-metre hurdles, shot put and high jump.

Miss May scored 2,350 points for second place, losing the lead she held after the first two events when a 4-11 effort in the high jump cost her precious points.

CALI, Colombia (CP) — Elizabeth Carruthers of Edmonton won the Pan-American Games women's springboard diving competition today as she came from behind to defeat Micki King of the United States. Beverley Boys of Pickering, Ont., won the third-place bronze medal.

GRIMACING as she gets away heave in shot put event during pentathlon competition at Pan-American Games is Toronto's Debbie Van Kiekebelt, who came from behind to take over lead from Victoria star Penny May after three of five events. Penny was leader in shot put.

U.S. Wins 16 Golds in Big Day

The Americans already have clinched the over-all track and field title in the men's competition while the Canadian team still has the most gold in the women's competition four. The U.S. women have three, and with just four of the 13 women's events left on the program, the windup could be close.

The United States just about mopped up everything in sight Wednesday, winning 16 of the 17 gold medals at stake in a variety of sports. In all, the Americans have taken 35 of 71 championships.

The Canadian team won one silver and six bronze medals Wednesday, coming close to a gold in the small-bore prone rifle competition. Gilmour Boa of St. Catharines, Ont., shot the same score as the U.S. winner Vic Auer, in the prone rifle but the American had a perfect 10-shot string to give him the gold.

Alf Mayer, the Kitchener, Ont., master mechanic, was the gold medal winner in the event four years ago in Winnipeg. Wednesday he could only manage a bronze.

POLE VAULT BRONZE

Bruce Simpson of Point Claire, Que., got a bronze in the pole vault with a height of 16 feet one inch; gymnasts Jennifer Diachun of Toronto and Lise Arsenault of Hudson, Que., shared bronze medals in the women's floor exercises; and middleweight weightlifter Keith Adams of Surrey, B.C., was the bronze winner in the press. Adams hoisted a total of 869 pounds to finish fourth over-all.

Jan Johnson, a University of Alabama student, gave the crowd of 40,000 a jolt while clearing 17-5¾ and fellow American Dave Roberts reached 17-0¾.

In the pentathlon, there was speculation that a new scoring system, put into effect Aug. 1 by the International Amateur Athletics Federation, would make it tougher for Miss Kiekebelt and Miss May because fewer pointss are given for their best events.

"I think perhaps the new system may work against us," track coach John Freeman of Vancouver said. "But then I can't determine for sure how it works because I haven't a copy of the new system and the Games people here won't give us one.

"But I think we should win two medals in this."

In the men's 1,600-metre relay, the Canadian foursome of Ian Gordon of Burnaby, B.C., Brock Aynsley of Kelowna, B.C., Craig Blackman of Toronto and Doug Chapman of Burnaby won their semi-final heat ahead of the U.S. team, anchored by John Smith.

Joan Pavelich of Vancouver, 18-year-old daughter of a former Canadian shot put and discus champion, placed seventh in the women's shot put with a toss of 43-8¾. The winner, 230-pound Californian Lynn Graham, did 51-8½ and erased the Games record 50-3 set in 1967 by Nancy McCredie of Brampton, Ont.

Al Hall of the U.S. won the hammer throw, sailing the hammer to another Games record with a toss of 216 feet.

A 5-3 win over Puerto Rico kept Canada's medal chances alive in baseball. But the Canadians, with a 3-2 won-lost record, faced unbeaten Cuba today.

VICTORIA FACES TRAIL TONIGHT . . . . . IN BABE RUTH TOURNEY

Californians Flatten Firefighters' Bubble

By IAN HAMILTON

Victoria Firefighters All-Stars' bubble may not have burst in the Babe Ruth Pacific sectional baseball tournament at Royal Athletic Park on Wednesday night, but it did go a little flat.

After three straight wins, the hometown heroes were bounced from the winners' bracket final, 5-0, by Fruitridge of Sacramento, the Northern California entry.

Northern California thus established itself as team to beat with the one-sided victory and relegated Victoria to the losers' bracket final against Trail tonight at 6:30.

Trail set up an all-Canadian final in the losers' bracket by pounding Oregon 10-0 behind the one-hit pitching of Rick Babcock and Keith Van de Keere in Wednesday's second game at Royal Athletic Park.

The winner of this evening's Trail-Victoria playoff comes right back, starting at 8:30, to face Northern California in the tournament final.

The successful Canadian team must beat the Californians twice in order to represent the Pacific section in the Babe Ruth "World Series."

California righthander Tim Jones had control problems, walking five Firefighters, but was on the ropes only once in recording the shutout. He gave up only four singles.

The 17-year-old Jones showed great poise when he worked himself out of a two-out, bases-loaded jam in the fourth inning.

Victoria's Wayne O'Malley singled and went to second on a wild pitch but a great catch by John Myers deprived Mike Squire of a chance to drive in the first Victoria run.

Jones then sandwiched walks by Rich Jones and reliever Mike Finlayson, which loaded the bags, between a pressure strikeout against Lawrie Garrett.

Victoria's hopes ended, however, when the big Sacramento hurler forced Jim McKay to hit a soft liner to second baseman Tom Simas for the third out.

Northern California blistered 11 hits off three Victoria hurlers, with losing pitcher Glen Wallis tagged for six of them before leaving the game in the third inning.

Four of the games hits were of the extra base variety. California right fielder Dave McDonald hit a double to the fence in centre field on a hit-and-run play in the third inning to score Shane Scott, who had singled earlier. McDonald later scored on John Myers' single.

For an encore in the fifth, McDonald blasted a long triple to the fence in left-centre and scored on a single by John Edwards.

Edwards scored California's first tally in the second inning when he doubled and came home on Larry Rodriquez' line single.

A sacrifice fly by Tom Simas scored Tim Kneppel, who had reached base on a free pass, to account for Fruitridge's other run in the fourth inning.

Jones struck out seven in breezing to the victory, while Victoria's relievers, Dave Anderson and Mike Finlayson, each gave up one run. Finlayson faced the last 16 batters and appeared to get stronger as the game progressed.

Should the Californians bow in tonight's 8:30 game, a sudden-death playoff will be staged Friday, starting at 6:30 p.m.

OUTDOOR SCENE

By Barry M. Thornton

Schools of herring splattered the calm surface while low-flying Bonaparte gulls swooped over the surfacing bait, occasionally catching a tardy diver. Inshore, the kelp bed slowly passed as we drifted with the receding tide. The occasional splash near and in the kelp marked the leap of a coho grilse as he fed or tossed the ever present sea lice from his body. The water was calm although occasional swells rocking the boat accentuated the rhythm of the musical pattering of the herring.

The patter patter of the rising herring was suddenly shattered by a shower of a score or more frantically leaping skyward as a cruising coho slashed through the school. Then crescent streams of herring shot skyward from the school as additional coho teamed in the wholesale slaughter. Searing and slashing, the coho churned the immediate water to a froth seeking the injured and slashing the strong. The froth continued for only a matter of a minute or two and then, satiated, the coho sounded.

Screaming gulls hovered and dived at the showering bait and then settled when the last coho sounded to dive for injured herring swimming erratically below the surface. When all was still, a myriad of stars sparkled through the water as the minute scales of the herring, lost in the fierce onslaught, slowly drifted away.

A few minutes later a whirl occurred 50 feet from the boat. Quickly it turned to a boil and then a deadly froth as the coho teamed again to slash through another ball of panic stricken bait.

★ ★ ★

At the first sign of the frantic shower I started the outboard and roared to the edge of the slashing school of coho, reeling in my mooching line as I went. Grabbing our spin-casting rods, my fishing partner and I quickly sent silver Deadly Dick lures across the school, letting them flutter down for just a moment and then rapidly reeled.

The cry, "One on!" split the air almost immediately followed by the high wine of the spinning reel as six pounds of fury tore the first, seemingly endless, run of line from the reel.

What followed then was a repetition of what has been an utterly phenomenal week of salt water fishing.

The light trout spinning rods bowed gracefully yet triumphantly from the double sky walking battles until finally defeated, the fighters were slowly eased into the net.

We motored back to the edge of the kelp bed and once again broke out our mooching rods and the white buzz bombs we were using. These we lowered beside the boat stripping off line until the lure was on the bottom. We then reeled the buzz bombs up a few feet.

In a steady rhythm we would lift the mooching rods we held and then drop the tip to the water letting the lure flutter down until the line became taut. A sudden interruption of the flutter telegraphed through the sensitive rods told of the fish interested in the crippled minnow action of the lure.

Lifting the rod tip up, a sudden jolt told of a strike and then the reel screamed as the line streamed out and out, and out. This was a chinook not a coho. I started the motor and sped away from the kelp hoping to keep the hooker out of the inevitable tangle. I was successful and long minutes later a prime 17-pound spring joined the seven coho lying in the tub.

★ ★ ★

This limit parallelled similar and equally successful outings we had had throughout the week. The area we found for this angler's nectar centred around a major kelp bed off the southern point of Kye Bay at Comox. An underwater rock formation jutting out from the point to the kelp bed appears to detour any travelling fish either from Point Holms or Kye Bay around the outer extremely of this bed.

The point of this kelp bed provided the greatest action for casting to feeding schools of coho or for mooching with a white buzz bomb. However, our frequent backtailing trips throughout the kelp beds from the beds in Kye Bay to the launching ramp at Point Holmes provided almost equal success.

Casting, buzz bombing or backtailing all have their own thrills. However, for outstanding visual suspense and anticipation, cast a silver spoon to the feeding schools. Strikes were almost guaranteed and the battle unequalled on the light rods.

Or, as my fishing partner Larry Petersen did, try a silver fly on conventional fly line and rod. He did, and after a twenty minute battle following a strike from a feeding school he boated a five pound memory which he will never forget.

By Canadian Press

Edmonton Eskimos and Calgary Stampeders got their last-minute kicks Wednesday night for victories in two Canadian Football League games.

For the Eskimos, winning their first game in three starts, it was Dave Cutler's 39-yard field goal with 35 seconds remaining which gave Edmonton a 20-19 win over British Columbia Lions.

Bill Van Burkleo was the hero for the Stampeders with a 37-yard single at 14:11 of the fourth quarter, giving Calgary a 9-8 decision over Ottawa Rough Riders in an interlocking game before 22,251 fans.

Frank Andruski's interception on his own 52 and return to the Ottawa 23 which set up the winning point, brought an angry outburst from Frank Clair, general manager of the Rough Riders.

CLAIMS INTERFERENCE

Clair said Andruski interfered with Hugh Oldham, attempting to catch the ball on a pass from quarterback Rick Cassatta, and should have been called for defensive interference.

Andruski appeared to bump into Oldham while chasing the ball but the Calgary veteran said referee Jim Pyper of Edmonton should have called it offensive interference.

"It was the worst call I've ever seen," said Clair in the press box. "Everybody saw the interference but the referee."

The Calgary game was highlighted by outstanding defensive play and fine kicking performances from punters Marcel deLeeuw and Van Burkleo.

RECOVERS OWN PUNT

DeLeeuw, traded to Ottawa earlier this year for Van Burkleo, punted 11 times for a 51.8 average and ignited Ottawa for the game's only touchdown when he recovered his own punt after Al Rankin fumbled on the Calgary 26.

Van Burkleo, who punted 10 times for a 46.2 average, also made a key first down when he picked up a loose ball on another punt attempt and scampered 33 yards. He also booted a 47-yard single in the second quarter.

Larry Robinson got Calgary's other points with two field goals, from 18 and 14 yards, and a 41-yard single on a wide-field goal attempt.

DUNCAN TOP RUSHER

Fullback Dennis Duncan of Ottawa led the rushing parade with 89 yards on 13 carries, and Herm Harrison of Calgary was the top receiver with 99 yards on five catches.

In Edmonton before 19,816 fans, a rugged Eskimo defence set up the winning kick by holding B.C. on a third-down gamble on its own 35 with less than a yard to go.

DEFENSIVE LINE HOLDS

Fullback Jim Evenson rammed into the line, but John Lagrone, Greg Pipes, Jerry Griffin, Ken Ferguson, Ron Forwick and Ed Molstad jammed him up.

Edmonton coach Ray Jauch said the gamble was a good move by B.C. boss Eagle Keys.

The field goal was Cutler's second of the night. He kicked a 42-yarder in the first quarter and converted touchdowns by Bob Houmard and Griffin.

John Ashton and Dave Easley got touchdowns for B.C., while Ted Gerela added two converts, kicked a 51-yard field goal and booted singles on field-goal attempts from the 37 and 38-yard lines.

DARKNESS INTERRUPTS STRATH'S UPSET BID

The Lower Island senior "B" men's softball playdowns goes into a third game at Central Park tonight with upset minded Stratchcona Hotel still clinging to a 1-0 advantage over Seaboard Construction in the best-of-three series.

Wednesday's second game ended in a 1-1 draw when darkness forced a halt after nine innings.

Strathcona scored a go-ahead run in the top of the eighth inning on a lead-off single by Bob Reid, an error and Glen Kildum's sacrifice fly. Another error, an infield out and Dave Lowes's ingle pushed across Seaboard's tying run in the bottom of the same inning.

Strathcona won the first game 3-2 Monday.

Gladu Whiffs 17 For League Mark

There were heroics on all fronts Wednesday as Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League teams chalked up three one-run decisions, but none of the efforts was more impressive than George Gladu's strikeout display.

Gladu set a league strikeout record by fanning 17 batters while hurling last-place William Head Steelers to a 4-3 decision over Gilmour Construction.

Gladu retired Gilmours on strikes in four of the seven innings.

GRAND-SLAM BLOW

Bell's Men's Wear cinched second place by shading first-place Langford Drywall despite a grand-slam home run by Wade Burns.

At Sooke, Don Frampton's leadoff homer touched off a four run uprising in the final inning as Century Inn nipped Sooke Merchants 4-3.

Astro Rookie Ensures Dodgers Won't Forget

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Los Angeles Dodgers forgot Ken Forsch once before, but they remember him now.

Forsch, a rookie right-hander, hurled a four-hitter for Houston Astros Wednesday night, shutting out the Dodgers 2-0 and ending a five-game LA winning streak with his first major league shutout.

Elsewhere in the NL Wednesday, Cincinnati Reds shut out New York Mets 1-0, Atlanta Braves trimmed Philadelphia Phillies 5-3, Montreal Expos nipped Pittsburgh Pirates 4-3 in 11 innings, St. Louis Cardinals downed San Francisco Giants 7-2 and Chicago Cubs won two from San Diego Padres 6-4 in the completion of a suspended game and then 3-0 in the regularly-scheduled contest.

AT OREGON STATE

Forsch, an outstanding pitcher at Oregon State, was drafted by the Astros in 1968.

"The night before the draft, I got a phone call from somebody with the Dodgers," Forsch said. "They asked if I was interested and I said yes. That's the last I heard from them. Just one phone call, that's all."

The next day, the Astros chose him as their No. 18 selection in the regular phase of the draft and Wednesday night, the Dodgers remembered him.

The loss cost the Dodgers a chance to pick up ground on San Francisco, the NL's West Division leaders. The Giants fell victim to Bob Gibson's 200th career victory, bowing on a seven-hitter.

Ted Hubiak slugged a three-run homer for the Cardinals as Gibson beat San Francisco for the 10th consecutive time. Only two other active pitchers, Juan Marichal of the Giants and Philadelphia's Jim Bunning, have passed the 200-victory plateau.

YANKEES WIN

In American League games, New York Yankees blasted Cleveland Indians 7-3; Detroit Tigers tripped Washington Senators 2-1; Baltimore Orioles topped Boston Red Sox 5-4 in 10 innings in the opener of a twi-night doubleheader before rain washed out the nightcap; Chicago White Sox buried California Angels 10-3; Oakland Athletics nudged Milwaukee Brewers 6-5, and Kansas City took a pair from Minnesota Twins, 2-1 and 3-0.

his style:

In the days when sail was king, B.C.'s weekend mariners knew a thing or two about the water. And the beer. Sure, there have been some changes — but the yachtsmen of yesteryear would still say "Aye" to Old Style. It's still their style. Slow brewed and naturally aged to wet a man-sized whistle. That's why it's British Columbia's favorite beer. Down the hatch, me hearties!

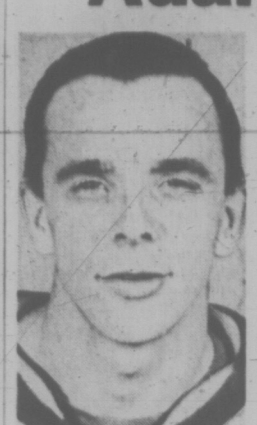
ROCKS BOPPED 17-8 . . . . . BY COQUITLAM

Adanac Act Not Funny



KEITH SCOTT
. . . mighty mite

Side by side, Wayne Shuttleworth and Keith Scott stand up as the "Mutt and Jeff" act of the Western Lacrosse Association.

But they don't look funny to rivals.

The tall and the short of Coquitlam did the things they can do best Wednesday at Memorial Arena and the Adanacs had little trouble in disposing of Victoria's slumping Shamrocks, 17-8.

It was Shamrocks' 16th setback in their last 17 games.

Shuttleworth, a sturdy six-foot-three hardrock, was mighty on defence in his first years in the league. In recent times, however, Shuttleworth decided to stretch his on-floor efforts two ways.

He turned it on Wednesday with a nine-point performance against Shamrocks. Shuttleworth's four goals made it 53 for the season. He added five assists to run his total to 64 and a league-leading point total of 117, moving nine points in front of New Westminster's Wayne Goss.

Scott, former Canadian boxing champion who has to stretch to reach the 5-8 mark, was a heavyweight on faceoffs. He took all 40 faceoffs during the game and wound up with a 26-14 edge against five Shamrocks who tried to handle him on the draws.

Coquitlam also was blessed with strong netminding from veteran Merv Schweitzer, and it was "no contest" after the first period when Adanacs left the floor with a 5-0 lead.

Coquitlam made it 6-0 at the 24-second mark of the second, and Victoria finally got on the scoresheet when Al McLean scored an unassisted effort at 3:57 of the same session.

Mike Gates added four goals to the Coquitlam total while Bill Robinson, Bob Rezansoff and Les Schumacher each pumped in a pair.

Ranjit Dillon and Charn Dhillon scored twice for Victoria while Ken Alexander, Dennis Somner, McLean and Don McNeill added the singles.

Coquitlam out-shot Victoria 60-44 in the tamest game of the season. Officials called only four minors, with three of them going to the Shamrocks.

ALERT BOATER AVERTS TRAGEDY

Six Saved From Knockout Fumes

A Port Alberni couple, their two children and two other men were snatched from death Tuesday when they were overcome by carbon monoxide fumes in a 17-foot boat near Bamfield.

Vern Buse, 34, his wife, Tina, their children, Debbie 12, and Ronnie, 11; Jimmy Malloy and Merv Garney were aboard the inboard-outboard cruiser owned by Buse's father, Ernie.

Fumes from a leaking exhaust manifold were not noticed. They all became unconscious.

A friend, Pat Gariepy, was following in his boat and became alarmed when he saw the other boat, the motor still running, banging against a rocky reef.

He dove over the side, swam to the battered boat and worked on the unconscious occupants, using cold water, slapping their faces and applying artificial respiration.

Using the two-way radio on board the Buse boat, he signalled for help. Ashore at Kildonan, his signals were picked up by Earle Goodwin, who flagged down a passing fish boat.

The six were taken aboard. Finally, the Bamfield lifeboat took the survivors ashore.

After careful examination, they were released from Bamfield Hospital at 9 p.m.

Relatives of the Buse family credit Gariepy's prompt action for saving the lives of all six.

The boat, heavily damaged, was towed ashore to Bamfield.

Takeover Vote For Ambulance Administraion

NORTH COWICHAN — Cowichan school district ratepayers — excluding Crofton and Westholme — will be asked Sept. 25 to approve a takeover, by the regional district, of the Duncan Kiwanis Ambulance Society's administration.

Ald. Margaret Robertson, member of the regional district's ambulance committee, says the takeover would involve only a 46-cent tax increase on a house valued at $15,000.

The people, she added, would still be charged ambulance fees.

The bylaw follows a threat by the Kiwanis society to cease operations if they do not receive assistance. The society has operated the service for 18 years.

North Cowichan council was told Wednesday that volunteer drivers have agreed to stay on when the region takes over.

If the regional district administers the service they will also be in charge of the new ambulance building (which was built under district auspices) and two vehicles, which the society has agreed to turn over for $1.

Lumber Firm to Muffle Noisy Chemainus Yard

NORTH COWICHAN — G. S. Doman Ltd. has agreed to muffle noise coming from its Chemainus lumber yard, Mayor Gerry Smith told council Wednesday.

Irate residents recently demanded action to curb the noises from the company's cutoff saw and trucks that run late into the night.

An engineering survey commisioned by the firm claimed the noise level is not above normal, especially considering the noise from the trucks on the Trans-Canada Highway and Henry Road.

But Mayor Smith said three "friendly" meetings were held with Doman and his controller Peter Small and improvements will be made.

Changes will include: construction of an acoustically designed building for the lumber and handling machinery; construction of a wall if feasible acoustically; equipping all Doman forklifts and trucks with better mufflers; further piling of lumber to act as acoustic barrier; and a general low-noise operation of vehicles without racing of motors, excessive dropping of loads and other jobs carried out in yard.

"I think they have done all they can to co-operate with us on this particular operation," Smith said. "I feel the engineering report will be the solution."

Ald. Don Morton suggested that if the lumber yard were to be rezoned from light industry to commercial, as nearby garages and businesses are, it would stop the company from enlarging their operation.

ASK FOR IT

"But it is up to the people who are complaining about the noise to ask for it," he pointed out.

"I think the suggestion has merit," Ald. Dennis Hogan said. "When dealing with noise pollution there is no such thing as a silent saw."

President of the Chemainus Ratepayers' and Citizens' Association, Dr. Henry MacHemer asked council to follow the situation carefully to see that the promises are carried out "because we want peaceful solutions and don't want it to explode."

Fire Hazard Drops, Loggers Back to Work

COWICHAN LAKE — Cooler weather has sent more than 650 Cowichan Lake district loggers back to work.

Company officials said the men, many laid off since July 21 due to the extreme fire hazard, will be kept working "as long as the weather holds."

Companies back on regular day shifts are: B.C. Forest Products, Caycuse — 250 men; T. W. McKenzie Logging Co., Mesachie Lake — 110; Western Forest Industries, Gordon River — 120, and Crown Zellerbach's, Nitinat, 160.

MacMillan Bloedel's Shawnigan Lake operation resumed its day shift with an extra 15 men added to the 60 who have been on early shift, while the Chemainus division said 240 employees will return to regular hours Friday.

A spokesman from the Lake Cowichan B.C. Forest Service station said the fire hazard reading had dropped to moderate and all roads in the area are open.

Fire and industrial restrictions have been lifted.

Voluntary Price, Wage Curbs May Be in Store for Britons

By KEVIN DOYLE

LONDON (CP) — The shadowy outlines of possible voluntary restraints on price and wage increases may be emerging in inflation-weary Britain after several months of cautious reappraisal by all sectors of the economy.

But commentators today, although expressing usual optimism, repeated warnings that it will be at least several months before any firm evaluation of such a policy can be made.

Their remarks were prompted by the setting up of a committee composed of labor, government and management representatives to study inflation, unemployment and slow economic growth.

The committee, thought to be the first of its kind here, will make a full report in October. It was established by the National Economic Development Council, roughly similar to the Economic Council of Canada.

The move follows a recent decision by the powerful Confederation of British Industries to ask the country's 200 largest firms to limit voluntarily all price increases to a maximum of five per cent for a year.

ALL SIDES CO-OPERATE

The committee represents one of the first concrete steps taken by unions, management and government to co-operate in discussing major economic problems and possible solutions.

Many observers had predicted that labor would refuse to follow the industries' initiative in much the same way that Canadian unions refused to formally commit themselves to a restraint formula outlined by the federal prices and incomes Commission.

But leaders of the 10-million member Trades Union Congress indicated Wednesday they will closely watch any slowdown in price increases and formulate future policy in light of the results.

The latest moves grow out of a series of recent events which have both increased public confidence and created a new soberness among many who had earlier shrugged off the need for restraint.

The government announced last month fairly wide reductions in consumer taxes, removal of controls on instalment buying and new tax incentives for expanding industries. Nationalized industries have pledged to keep price increases to five per cent or less.

This, coupled with the possibility of restrictions on price increases, led to a degree of public optimism. Added to these measures is the government's assurances that entry into the European Common Market would spur industrial expansion and raise standards of living.

But countering these encouraging moves for British taxpayers, is a 3.4-per-cent seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate in July, considered an exceptionally high level in Britain.

Prices have increased as well by about 10 per cent over the last year, compounding the difficulties from unemployment.

KING HASSAN FIRES CABINET

REFORM PLEDGED AFTER COUP BID

RABAT (AP) — King Hassan II of Morocco has promised political and economic reforms to loosen his feudal grip on this North African country and eliminate the corruption that led to the bloody attempted coup last month.

He said in a television address Wednesday night he is dismissing Premier Ahmed Laraki and his government and replacing them with a new cabinet responsible to Parliament instead of to the king alone.

The king, 42, invited the country's two largest political parties, the nationalist Istiqlal Independence party and the leftist National Union of Popular Forces, to end their opposition and join him in reforms.

There was no immediate response from the party leaders, who strongly opposed the king's imposition of a new constitution last year and refused to participate in parliamentary elections held under it. They said the document was designed to perpetuate Hassan's one-man rule, and as a result of their boycott the current Parliament is composed almost exclusively of royal nominees.

The king said the changes grew out of a "searching self-analysis" following the abortive coup July 10, in which more than 300 persons were killed.

He promised a merciless crackdown on corruption and said harsh punishment awaits "both the corrupters and the corrupted."

Disgust at the widespread corruption in official circles was considered one of the chief motives of the generals who attempted to depose Hassan.

Hassan also promised a reorganization of the economy "on an egalitarian basis" and, in an apparent attack on the feudal aristocracy, commented: "We have observed that the rich get richer while the poor make no progress."

The king said there will be no changes in Morocco's foreign policy, which has been strongly pro-Western while paying lip service to the Arab "liberation" of Palestine.

Boys Top Snoopers In Space

KETTERING, England (AP) — Each time the Russians launch cosmonauts or a spy satellite into orbit round the earth, the odds are the news will come quickly—perhaps first—from the schoolboy snoopers of Kettering.

Some of their equipment wouldn't look out of place in a museum; but the boys and Geoffrey Perry, their science master at Kettering Grammar (High) School, consistently beat the professionals at sophisticated tracking stations in Europe and the United States.

They do it by monitoring bleeps from space on rudimentary radio receivers slotted into a corner of the school's main science laboratory or kept by their bedsides at home.

The performance of Kettering tracking station call sign G3 FOZ, has won plaudits from space scientists. It has put Kettering, a small market town 75 miles north of London, on the space age map.

The team's latest triumph was to spot the launching of Soyuz 11 in June within a minute after the ill-fated spacecraft and its crew of three cosmonauts, who died in descent, went into orbit.

NEWS BEAT TASS

A quick call to the British Press Association news agency and the news was broken, a full half hour ahead of the official announcement by Tass, the Soviet government news agency.

Tracking space satellites and being ready to spot new launches or manoeuvres in space means all-night listening sessions and doing a lot of preparatory homework.

At school, Perry works with Derek Slater, 41, another science teacher, and a team of three schoolboys. At home, he is helped by his 15-year-old daughter, Isobel, and his wife.

Spotting the Soyuz 11 launch was "typical of the detailed groundwork that has to be put in before every Kettering first.

Things began moving when two of the boys—Alan Mason, 13, and David Moggleton, 16—noticed Salute, the Russian space laboratory, had begun signalling again after a five-week gap.

HIT JACKPOT

They told Perry. He immediately began doing mathematical calculations to work out when the Russians were most likely to launch another spacecraft if a linkup with Salute was planned.

He hit the jackpot and had monitor listening as the first bleeps announced Soyuz 11 was in space.

Moggleton, who was drafted into Perry's team three years ago, has an army surplus radio receiver in his bedroom at home where he could listen in to Soyuz 11's progress.

Climbers Near Summit

WHITEHORSE, Y.T. (CP) — Fine weather was reported Wednesday on Mt. Logan, the highest peak in Canada, where a nine-member climbing team from the United States is reported a few days short of the 19,850-foot summit.

A three-man advance party slept Tuesday night at the 13,500-foot level, with the main party 1,000 feet further down the mountain.

The expedition was delayed for days by storms but the weather cleared last Saturday and the nine men were flown to the 10,000-foot level to begin the climb.

Vacation Fever Hits Federal Cabinet

By JOHN HAY

OTTAWA (CP) — Every weekday this month Environment Minister Jack Davis steps into a roadside phone booth, unfolds the door, inserts a dime and calls his Ottawa office over the roar of passing lumber trucks.

The telephone is a few miles from his ranch—which has no phone—deep in the British Columbia interior, where he is spending his vacation.

Mr. Davis, his cabinet colleagues and a good part of the senior public service stay away from Ottawa in droves in August, leaving the city to the tourists.

The cabinet wound up its summer business at 2 a.m. last Friday, after a marathon month of committee meetings and full-dress cabinet sessions.

Next day, they began to scatter across the country and overseas on summer vacations.

They will convene again just before the Commons resumes Tuesday, Sept. 7, after a two-month summer recess.

Most leave strict instructions with their staff not to disclose their destinations.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp's aides, for example, will only say that he is off for two weeks on a trip that will include stops in Europe.

Justice Minister John Turner will spend some time at his summer home near St. Andrew's, N.B., but will also travel outside the country.

Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford is somewhere in northern British Columbia, and Energy Minister J. J. Greene is at a Rocky Mountains resort.

Transport Minister Don Jamieson's office says he will visit his Burin-Burgeo riding in Newfoundland after accompanying the Trudeaus on their Atlantic tour. Between then and September they "can't say."

Prime Minister and Mrs. Trudeau will tour Europe for about two weeks. But apart from a visit to Yugoslavia, where Mr. Trudeau will meet Marshal Tito, his office is keeping the itinerary private.

Other ministers are not as secretive about their vacation plans.

Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson, for example, is working his ranch in his riding near Medicine Hat, Alta.

Other cabinet members, including Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien, home today from a tour of the Soviet Union, and Health Minister John Munro, apparently have not decided where they will vacation.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, just back from China, will retire to his Halifax home Friday for two weeks.

The New Democrat leader, David Lewis, has already had his vacation: About 10 days at Tanglewood, Mass., where the Boston Symphony stages an open-air concert program in the Berkshire Mountains.

Laundry Markers Help Police Tag Ontario Criminals

TORONTO (CP) — If you're planning to commit a crime in Ontario, play it safe and start doing your own laundry.

Otherwise, a little piece of paper could put you behind bars.

That little piece of paper is a laundry marker. Chances are it has a mate somewhere in the laundry and dry-cleaning mark identification file at Ontario Provincial Police headquarters in Toronto.

Staff Sgt. John Foley, a specialist in the technical areas of the records and communications branch, says the technique is based on the principle that every laundry or dry-cleaning establishment in Ontario uses a tag or marker different from any other in detail.

On file now are samples of tags from more than 33,000 laundries, along with information which would help police identify them.

Every spring and fall the file helps identify bodies that come to the surface after being in the water for a long time.

Safecrackers were apprehended when they left behind their jackets, with laundry markers still attached.

CAUGHT CATTLE THIEVES

It's been used to catch thieves who killed livestock for the meat, and then left behind their blood-spattered aprons in the field. And it helped identify nine victims of the crash of an Air Canada plane near Toronto International Airport in 1970.

The file has been in operation for 15 years. It's the only one in Canada and one of the few in the world.

Officers associated with the file like to talk about how a 19-year-old tag helped convict a burglar in a 1966 case at Napanee, about 25 miles west of Kingston.

Following a number of cottage break-ins, a suspect's car was searched and articles ranging from toasters to bed linen were discovered.

At the suspect's residence a pillow case was found with a Chinese laundry mark on it.

A check through the file showed it was for the Lee-Jue Chinese Laundry in Napanee.

The laundry had gone out of business in November, 1965, but the owner was able to name the man to whom the pillow case belonged. The pillow case-owner was one of the burglar's victims, although the owner told police he hadn't used the laundry in 19 years.

But the laundry records went back 20 years and the tag was used to convict the suspect.

Chemicals 'Foiled' Famine

WINNIPEG (CP) — The president of Canada Packers Ltd. says chemical food additives have been treated with "the horror story approach" but that in reality they have helped to build a bigger and healthier society.

W. F. McLean, speaking to the Canadian Institute of Food Technology, said current trends toward organic farming and eating habits were comparable to planned famine.

"We could scarcely feed ourselves on this continent without the use of chemical fertilizer. To talk glibly about eliminating fertilizer from agricultural practice and returning to so-called organic farming seems to be nonsense. In developing countries it literally means taking food out of the mouths of millions."

Mr. McLean said frequent comparisons between synthetic and natural food substances should be exposed "for the sham they are."

RULES PREVENT ABUSE

"Natural poisons are just as toxic as their synthetic duplicates and nature is not always benign," he said.

Some additives were essential nutrients added to prevent nutritional deficiencies and the use of these additives could be strictly controlled by modern technology.

He said the food and drug regulations lay down strict rules which protect the public and its food from abuse.

"A good example of a nutritional food additive is iodide in common salt," said Mr. McLean. "It has practically eliminated goitre in many parts of this continent."

The Canada Packers president blamed sensational press and television accounts for distorting the good side of chemical food additives.

He said the food additives must be treated with caution and respect and that only thoroughly tested chemicals should be added and that the food industry should promote accurate and straightforward information on the subject.

Roadwork Costs Worry Oak Bay

Oak Bay Council's works committee will take another hard look at the cost — estimated at $75,000 — to provide roads and services for a proposed high-rise apartment-office complex overlooking Windsor Park.

The committee decided Tuesday night to ask for more intensive studies of the services question after reading a preliminary report by municipal officials.

Aldermen expressed concern over the potential costs involved in the expansion of road and sewage facilities. The $75,000 estimate covers roadwork only — not underground services.

The complex would cover almost the entire block bounded by Windsor, Newport, Currie and Goodwin.

Ald. Douglas Watts said: "We should have complete layout of proposed traffic lanes. We don't want a wide expanse of asphalt that isn't necessarily going to be used."

Ald. John Goult added, "We don't want parking on Newport near the park just for the benefit of the two towers."

The complex, proposed by Graham Developments Ltd. of Vancouver, would overlook Windsor Park.

In his report, Robert Sloat, engineering assistant, stated that necessary roadwork, not including finderground services, would cost $75,000.

The committee also decided that reports should be made, showing how much it would cost to bring the current sewage system up to standard and how much it would cost to provide the service needed for the additional 200 suites and stores that would be in the new complex.

Ald. Brian Smith noted: "The sewage report clearly indicates the system isn't adequate at peak times — we're looking at fairly major construction there."

Permission was given the B.C. Travelling Craft and Art Faire to hold a medieval type festival at Willows Park Friday, Saturday and Sunday from noon to dusk.

It will include medieval play, story-telling, pastoral music, exhibition of crafts and other events.

The parks and recreation committee also gave permission for the Oak Bay Youth Commission to stage old-fashioned slow bicycle races on the Esplanade as part of Bike Week.

The races will be held Aug. 12 from 7 to 9 p.m. on the stretch of the Esplanade between Estevan and Cattle Point.

The streets and traffic committee gave approval for loading zones at the sidewalk entrance to the Uplands Gate Apartment on Cadboro Bay and the Willow Crest Apartment at 2233 Beach.

Works superintendent R. A. Futcher, in explaining maintenance account figures, said that a jump of more than $3,000 in dealing with weeds and insects, was due to the encroachment of a weed called Creeping Charlie.

TENTATIVE AGREEMENT REACHED

Police Pay Fight Over—Maybe

Police in Victoria and Saanich Wednesday night reached tentative agreement with their commissions on a pay dispute.

If accepted by the memberships of the Victoria Police Union and the Saanich Police Association and police commissions, the pattern is expected to be extended to Oak Bay and Esquimalt policemen.

No details were released by either side pending ratification meetings, but leaders of both sides are recommending the settlement.

Key issue in the dispute was pay parity with Vancouver and lower mainland police forces, sought by policemen here and opposed by the police commissions. Greater Victoria police, at the first-class constable classification, earned $728 a month at the end of last year. Vancouver area police in a one-year settlement this year, earn $887 a month at the comparable classification.

An earlier offer by Victoria which would have brought the first-class constable pay to $884 by July 1 of next year was rejected by policemen.

Meetings to accept or reject the tentative settlement are expected to be held Friday night.

A joint statement was issued shortly before midnight by both sides after an all-day session involving both Victoria and Saanich under mediation officer Clark Gilmour.

The statement said "a basis of settlement has been reached," that both sides unanimously agreed to recommend settlement and that the terms would be submitted to memberships and police commissions wihout delay.

"Full credit must be given to Mr. Gilmour for his patience, perseverance and assistance generally, without which it is most doubtful that terms of settlement acceptable to all negotiating committees would have been reached," the statement said.

Police Slowdown Costing $20,000 Monthly: Pollen

The Victoria police union's work-to-rule stance is costing the city $20,000 a month in lost revenue, council's finance committee learned today.

Committee asked for a full report on the effects of the union action from the police commission.

All police operations that involve revenues to the city are being "soft-pedalled," acting Mayor Clyde Savage said.

City officials later refused to estimate the total cost of the police union's bargaining fever.

Both sides in the pay contract dispute reached a secret tentative settlement Wednesday night, city manager Bill Hooson said, and the city is not prepared to jeopardize the chances of a final agreement.

The work-to-rule stance brought a blast from Ald. Peter Pollen, who indicated he did not think the matter was entirely the responsibility of the Police Commission.

'TREASON'

"I don't think we have asked enough questions. I mean, who's running who?"

"I am advised we are losing $20,000 a month. As I mentioned earlier, 100 years ago this would have been considered treason."

POLLEN

Hooson said that his understanding of the work-to-rule guidelines is that police are exercising their right to use "discretion" in booking certain offences.

Ald. Tom Christie described it by saying there is "free parking" on one-hour and two-hour roadside parking areas.

Savage said "it's quite obvious" that the simple revenue areas of police work are being "soft-pedalled" but added "I can assure you that things like break and entry" are being watched even more than normally.

WHY PAY?

When Savage said the city has to treat the situation like any business might, Pollen interjected:

"When you have a strike in any business, you don't pay your workers." The police, however, are getting paid and not doing their jobs, he added.

"I don't suggest they are not protecting citizens . . . but they are also losing $20,000 a month."

Hooson said later the full details of what the work-to-rule action has cost the city will be revealed following a work agreement.

Aldermen Support Delay In Hike on Permit Fees

Increases on construction permit fees should not become effective until Sept. 1, Victoria council's finance committee recommended to council today.

The committee made the decision after a delegation of contractors said the industry had not been given fair warning of the increase, established last spring at budget time.

Mike Griffin, a plumbing contractor and spokesman for the building industries, said businessmen did not disagree with the philosophy of the 30-per-cent increase in permit fees, but they thought notification of the hike was "overlooked" by city officials.

Fees already charged at the higher rates may be redeemed on request.

The delegation left the meeting while committee was talking of a three-month extension of the old fee structure.

Ald. Peter Pollen suggested an Oct. 1 date, but Ald. Tom Christie, opposing any extension initially, finally settled for Sept. 1.

LEFT OUT

The industry argued that contracts awarded before the fee hike did not include the increase in their costs.

Tom Lawson, an electrical contractor, said his firm might have lost $300 on its contract on the new Victoria Press Ltd. building, had the fee increase become effective two days earlier.

Christie said contractors always must face changes in cost between contracting bidding and awarding dates.

But Griffin said "we get a guarantee on the prices we are going to get" form supply companies.

"We know all costs: this one of the few areas where we find all of a sudden a significant increase."

The decision to increase the fees had been made to make fees charged pay for the service.

Cyclists May Pay to Ride

The free status of the bicycle rider in Victoria may be coming to an end.

Council's finance committee today asked for a report from city officials on the feasibility of licensing and registering all bicycles in the city.

Comptroller Jim Bramley said council should not expect to make any money out of such an operation, but registration might provide some control.

Estimates of the number of bicycles operating in the Greater Victoria area are as high as 55,000.

Committee was told Oak Bay at present licenses bicycles and keeps track of serial numbers on a computer.

SANDRINGHAM

'Plenty of Life' Left in Strike

The Victoria Labor Council was told Wednesday night there is "plenty of life" remaining in the 41-week strike against Sandringham Private Hospital.

"There are those who say Sandringham is a lost cause," said Jack Phillips, co-ordinator for Local 1311 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees on strike since Sept. 30 for a first contract.

"All I say is, judge not the play 'til the final curtain is down."

NO APOLOGIES

Both persons, he said, have claimed that 75 per cent of the original 28 strikers are working at other jobs. He offered no apologies if this was the case because those who are working elsewhere are in difficult financial circumstances.

"If these reports are true, and I believe they are, they indicate Chabot is working in cahoots with the management of Sandringham with the deliberate aim of smashing the strike," he said.

He believed that "the stage is being set" for a second attempt to decertify Local 1311 as bargaining agent for the employees. An earlier attempt by management was rejected by the Labor Relations Board.

Taking aim at those who have replaced the strikers and kept the private hospital running, Phillips said "scabs are on a level with child molesters."

He said success or failure of the Sandringham strike would make the difference between opening the way for a big organizing drive among "thousands of bitterly exploited service workers, mostly women" or closing the door to this opportunity.

Phillips said Chabot is not intervening "because the cabinet does not want him to move, because geriatric care should be a government responsibility, not of petty speculators."

One delegate said he has heard "a lot of flowery talk" but "we do nothing but talk. I imagine in another 10 months it will be the same."

Phillips said he had been sent here only 3½ weeks ago as full-time co-ordinator and that there was no one working full time on the strike before. He said he would debate this subject, but privately.

Amchitka 2 Nudge Premiers

The Victoria-based organization opposed to the proposed nuclear test blast on Amchitka Island in October will not be satisfied with a mere postponement of the blast — it wants the test abandoned.

The group — Amchitka Two — has sent a telegram to the provincial premiers attending a conference in Victoria which started today. The telegram read:

"Postponement of the nuclear test on Amchitka Island to May 1972 is not good enough. We want immediate united action by the premiers of the provinces of Canada to urge President Nixon to cancel 'Cannikin'."

The U.S. Senate last week voted to postpone the blast until May, 1972, unless Nixon authorizes it. The test is a five-megaton explosion on the small island in the Aleutian chain.

Numerous conservation and ecology groups have opposed the scheduled test, saying it will endanger wildlife and possibly trigger earthquakes and tidal waves on the Pacific Coast.

Amchitka Two has also announced it plans to hold a silent vigil on the lawn in front of the Legislative Buildings to commemorate the 26th anniversary of the dropping of an atomic bomb on Hiroshima, Japan, on Aug. 6 1945.

The vigil will be held through the night.

RCMP Warn of Bad Trips From 'Orange Sunshine'

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police today issued a warning to potential drug-users about a bad strain of LSD which is circulating in the city.

The drug, known locally as "Orange Sunshine," has been found to contain mostly strychnine, a deadly poison.

The force's drug squad reports the drug has caused bad reactions among users. Fifteen cases have been reported in the last three weeks.

The drug is said to have originated in California.

Oak Bay 'Vigilantes' Form

Seventy-five residents of Oak Bay's Windsor Park area Wednesday night formed a group which will make suggestions on community issues to Oak Bay council and planners.

The group was formed in response to a challenge by the Vancouver Island Chapter of the Architectural Institute of British Columbia's Project Peninsula.

One of the chief topics under discussion was a Vancouver developer's bid to erect two nine-storey towers on a block immediately overlooking the park.

A committee of four was formed and instructed to examine the master plan for Oak Bay, proposed in 1967.

Other issues of concern to the group are the cleaning up of Oak Bay Beach, the threat of spot zoning for high density developments and the provision of adequate neighborhood amenities.

The meeting is the second to be held in the neighborhood. The first was in mid-July.

The next meeting will be held Sept. 9 at 7 p.m. in the park pavilion with subsequent meetings planned for the first Thursday of each month.

IT WOULD BE UNFAIR to term last May's Miles for Millions a failure. After all, thousands of young and older Victorians tackled the 25-mile hike, and other thousands paid off for the miles these achieved. But the blister derby has proved a much less than total success, and it's probable that any future march will be planned to an altered recipe.

In May, a take of $100,000 was hoped for.

This could mean that various agencies among which the take is to be distributed will receive smaller sums than anticipated when cheques are sent out.

In the aftermath of the walk, a total collection of about $75,000 in mile-rates was expected.

Today, with approximately $60,000 in the kitty, University of Victoria Miles for Millions organizers are confronted by what amounts to a $15,000 deficit.

As a last-ditch hope of boosting the total, the campus committee has decided on a direct appeal to citizens who haven't been called on by marchers they backed.

If you happen to be among these, you are asked to deposit money pledged in the Bank of Montreal Miles for Millions account, or to turn it in at Uvic Student Union building.

Bob Ballam, acting committee chairman, tells me that another march won't be held for at least 18 months. Meanwhile, he and other committee members are questioning the wisdom of spreading returns from the next walk among 21 different organizations — an approach which Ballam fears may have reduced public interest.

"I think we should get back to fund-raising for one specific international project," he said.

A sound idea. Perhaps a well-focussed project like the original one—the providing of schools-in-vans for underdeveloped countries—might do the trick.

Tucked away in my fishing kit are some anglers' lures from far Siberia. My sister who returned to Vancouver last week from travels in foreign parts, came on them in an Irkutsk shop and decided to gladden my heart with them.

One item is a set of little wabblers fitted with treble hooks, that I mean to dunk as soon as may be. But what intrigues me most is a card of artificial "flies" the like of which I've never seen before.

Each consists of a large hook sparsely-wrapped with red thread. Up front is tied a sheaf of four white plastic wings laid back to back.

Perhaps some sport fisherman who has wet a line in Siberian waters would be kind enought to fill me in on these creations. How do you fish 'em, and for what?

In the course of any workyear, I meet a number of men and women who want to be writers, but few who back their hopes by fitting ideas with words. And much too often, those who do so give up the struggle after a few rejection slips.

Not all of them, though. One of the exceptions called me this week in the course of a visit to Victoria. He asked me if I remembered a long talk we had over coffee in Toronto many years ago.

I was in the magazine business then, and talked with a lot of working and would-be writers. Still, I did recall a young man who not only wanted to write, but was boiling with ideas and words.

For him, the break-through has been a very long time coming. There were interruptions of various sorts, setbacks and discouragements. I'm glad to report, however, that he has just placed a five-part serial with CBC radio.

It's scheduled for September. Byline, John Keith, and more power to his typewriter.

FDA Requests More Manpower To Do the Job

WASHINGTON (WP)—The Food and Drug Administration told Congress this week that it needs five to six times as much manpower and money as it now has if it is to keep adulterated, contaminated and mislabeled foods out of the market place.

Commissioner Charles C. Edwards said that the FDA has 210 full-time food inspectors. The agency's budget request for food activities in the field in fiscal 1972, $19.7 million, would allow for about 50 more inspectors.

Edwards and top aides, testifying at a hearing of the House commerce subcommittee on public health and environment, also disclosed:

- That the FDA inspects each food plant an average of once in six years (although agency rules say that each plant should be inspected at least once every two years).
- That 2,300 food plants, about one-fifth of the total which had been scheduled for inspection in the fiscal year ending next June 30, probably will not be inspected, because the "emergency" caused by the Bon Vivant Soup Co. case consumed 125 man-years of effort. (A can of the firm's Vichyssoise was blamed last month for the botulism death of a Bedford, N.Y., man and the paralysis of his wife.)
- That among the 2,300 plants, at least 20 per cent would be found defective in some respect, were they to be inspected. Rep. James W. Symington (Dem., Mo.) said that this endangers the public, even if "unwittingly and unintentionally" on the FDA's part.
- That's FDA's inspections of imported food products numbered 51,000 in fiscal year ended last June 30 (and barred, for example, cheeses from France, Italy and Yugoslavia that contained excess pesticide residues), but that there should be a "minimum" of 75,000 to 100,000 such inspections annually.
- That FDA has only 43 inspectors to check imports, not only of foods, but also of drugs and other products, as well.
- That FDA is "daily falling further and further behind" in its inspection activities at the nation's 60,000 food plants.
- That to audit food safety at the retail level, FDA tests a "market basket" of 117 products purchased twice a year in each of five locations—but tests only for pesticide residues which then are averaged for the whole shopping list.

Best and Quickest

"I don't think that's a very good way to test," said Paul G. Rogers (Dem., Fla.) the subcommittee chairman.

He said he called the hearings to find "the best and quickest" way for Congress to enable a "woefully under-manned and financed" FDA to get the resources it needs "to ensure that all the food that the American consumer eats is safe."

As things stand, a handicapped agency is doing "a grossly inadequate job," he said.

Rogers asked Edwards to submit a draft bill to require food plants to notify FDA of their existence (some new plants do not, the commissioner said).

Edwards testified to the need for a fivefold or sixfold increase in food inspectors and funding—a "ball park estimate"—under questioning. His prepared testimony said nothing of it.

Pressed by Rogers, Edwards said the explanation was that "absolutely final figures" had not yet been developed.

No Interference

Rogers said he had "feedback" that the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) had prevented FDA from estimating its needs in prepared testimony. Edwards denied there had been intereference either from OMB or the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Later, talking with reporters, Edwards neither admitted nor denied a suggestion that higher authority had inhibited him. Later still, a spokesman rejected as without foundation a claim by an agency source that a passage mentioning the need for funds and manpower had been deleted by HEW from an early draft of the statement.

Deputy Commissioner James D. Grant testified that OMB does set "an over-all ceiling," although FDA succeeded in raising it sufficiently to permit a request to Congress for 150 to 200 more additional food personnel in the field, including 50 to 60 more inseptcors, in fiscal 1972.

Diane Kennedy, 27, operates free store in dilapidated white shed

HELP YOURSELF AT FREE STORE

Don't Throw Things Away —Someone May Need Them

By HELEN MELNYK

Shoplifters are shunned by all local stores—except one.

Anyone can help himself to all he wants, without paying, at the Free Store on 335 Niagara St., in James Bay. As implied by the name, the store's merchandise bear no price tags.

Diane Kennedy, 27, has been operating the "business" since mid-May, when she coverted a dilapidated, white shed behind her house into a free store.

She said the venture is a "success".

"People get stuff they need, and the store keeps on getting more things in," she said.

Barter System

Originally, the store was intended to operate on the barter system, Diane said. But the prople who take things usually don't bring anything, and the people who bring things usually don't take things. The "bringers" are usually middle-aged people, and the "takers", long-haired youths.

"The haves and the have-nots", as Diane put it.

She said that although there is no limit to what one person may take, no one, besides children, takes "too much".

On opening day, the store was plundered in a couple of minutes by hordes of neighbourhood urchins. Now Diane leaves a box full of toys in front of the shed to distract the little materialists from the goodies within.

Door Knobs

The quantity and type of stock depends on the whims of the "bringers". One man brought in a truck load of door knobs, hinges, faucets, motor pieces, and other odds and ends.

Someone else left behind a bushel of miniature flags of the world's nations. The flags were a big hit with children Diana said. The street looked like the United Nations after they stuck the flags in all the fences and bushes.

Staple goods include second-hand clothes, shoes, books, and kitchen utensils. The hottest items are baby clothes, and culinary tools. But most of the other clothes hang around.

Business booms at the end of the month, when people who are moving bring in their surplus possessions.

About a dozen people come in every day, Diane said. They range from pig-tailed 'freaks' from Mexico to non-English speaking Portuguese families. Most come out of curiosity, but some are looking for specific items.

She said that some people feel funny about helping themselves to anything they want.

"It's free? You mean I don't have to pay anything?", they often ask.

People keep asking Diane "Why do you do it? What do you get out of it?"

"Just all the things that I've gotten for myself makes it (the store) worth it," Diane said.

No Spending

She has completely furnished her four-bedroom house with sofas, chairs, tables, beds, and dishes without spending a cent.

Scrounging—getting something for nothing—has become a way of life for Diane, partly through economic necessity.

"I never buy anything except for odd bits of clothing and food", she said with pride. "Scrounging is an art. It takes courage: the courage to go up to people and say I need such and such. Do you need it? Can I have it?"

Diane, a widow, said she realized the need for a free store in Victoria when she was "super-broke" last winter. She was unable to find a job and had to live on welfare. Her budget was so limited that she couldn't even afford to buy hand-me-down clothes for her six-year-old daughter, Karen.

Prices High

"I'm not knocking Goodwills or the Salvation Army —they're doing a good job" she said. "But the prices they charge are too much for some people."

She said she heard of free stores in other cities, "so why not set one up in the empty back shed to help out other super-broke people."

News of the store spread by word-of-mouth and people started coming, she said.

The motto of the Free Store is "Don't throw it away. Pass it on".

Someone else may need it.

A Year of Eating

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI) — The average American eats an estimated 1,500 pounds of food a year, says a consumer specialist at the Pennsylvania State University.

The specialist, Harold E. Neigh, said a person eats about 50 different kinds of food each week. This fare includes about 10 pounds of fruit and vegetables, 4½ quarts of milk, 1½ pounds of sugar and seven eggs.

Tests Show Four Detergents Exceeding Phosphate Content

OTTAWA (CP) — Tests by the federal environment department show that four laundry detergents on the Canadian market may not have complied with regulations restricting phosphate content to 20 per cent.

The department said this week its tests found 22.1 per cent phosphate content in Vai-U and 21.5 per cent in Laundre X, both products of Canada Packers.

The other two brands are Bestlines B-7, from Bestline Products of Canada, 21 per cent, and Control, from Diversey Canada Ltd., 20.2 per cent.

Additional samples of the products are being tested to determine whether manufacturers will be prosecuted, the department said.

The present 20 per cent limit on phosphates is to be cut to 5 per cent by Dec. 31, 1972. Before the federal regulations, phosphate content ranged up to 38 per cent.

A Bestline distributor in Vancouver said that the company discontinued production of B-7 more than a year ago, and replaced it with phosphate-free B-70.

Dandruff is very common. It is aggravated by the use of an alkalic shampoo. Most cases of dandruff can be kept under control by washing the hair regularly with a non-alkalic shampoo. In severe cases I lately use on my customers a new product from Switzerland, Auiferol, with exceptional good results. A tube for two or three treatments sells for $1.00.

Children's Bicycles Inspected at Clinic

By ANN DUNSMUIR

The age-old appeal of getting something for nothing was the bait that attracted most of the children Wednesday to the safe-bicycling clinic, sponsored by the Capital Region Safety Council, on Fort Street.

About 20 children had registered for the session, which included bicycle inspections and safety films, but only six showed up.

"I came because I had nothing else to do, and I wanted to have my bike inspected," said John Thomas, 12, a student at Margaret Jenkins Elementary School.

Teri-Ann Todd, 8, also attended the clinic because she "had nothing else to do and my bike is a wreck."

Her bicycle may well have been a "wreck," but it's paint job was somewhat of a compensation. Her brother had painted her "wheels" in brilliant shades of shocking-pink and chartreuse green. And his efforts made it extremely difficult for Constable Ken Dibben of Victoria City Police, to find the registration number.

The only child who had been motivated by a desire to learn to drive safely was Chris Bassl, 6. But the idea was not entirely his own.

His mother, Mrs. Norma Bassl, said he had just been given his first bicycle and she was afraid to "turn him loose on the road until he knew the safety rules and road signals."

The bicycle clinics are a first in Canada, according to John Reeves, general manager of the safety council. He was disappointed by the turnout, but said, "We are fighting the summer holidays."

Reeves said that about 60 children and eight adults have attended the weekly clinics which have been held now for three weeks. The council plans to hold the clinics until winter but will move to different locations in the Greater Victoria area. Clinics will be held Wednesdays at 10 a.m. at Eaton's car park until the end of August.

Bicycles are given a 10 point safety check by Constable Dibden.

The check covers bells, brakes, handlebars, fenders, pedals, chain, wheels, tires, seat adjustment, and frame. Bicycles that pass the test are registered as "safe bikes" with the safety council.

Each month registration numbers are drawn for awards, presented by the council.

After bicycle inspection, the children are shown safety films.

The Wednesday students were impressed by scenes showing what happens when a car travelling 47 m.p.h. hits a bicycle dead centre. The sight of the scattered, incredibly small pieces of junk lying in the road after the accident brought gasps of surprise from the audience.

The council will also run motorcycle clinics Monday evenings, at 7:30 p.m. starting Aug. 16.

New Toothpaste Tubes Will Help Consumers

OTTAWA (CP) — Toothpaste manufacturers will be limited within a year to selling only six sizes of their brands, Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford announced today.

Standardization of sizes—about 30 different sizes are on the market now—will eliminate confusion for the consumer and enable better price comparisons between brands and tube sizes, Mr. Basford said in a news release.

The tube size restrictions were drafted in consultation with manufacturers.

New Sizes

The new sizes also will be marked in millilitres—a metric volume measurement. Tubes now are marked with content by weight.

"This is a step towards eventual metrication of all measurements in Canada, and I hope that other product manufacturers will follow this lead as they standardize their containers," Mr. Basford said.

The six standard sizes will be 25, 50, 75, 100, 125 and 150 millilitres.

Regulations making the standard sizes mandatory will be put into force under the recently enacted federal packaging and labelling act. The millilitre sizes should start appearing in about six months and the regulations will be put into force fully within a year, the announcement said.

Manufacturers have agreed to drop such nomenclature as "giant" and "family size" in tube descriptions. These had often served to confuse rather than enlighten consumers.

"Sensible tube sizing is long overdue and I welcome the fact that the toothpaste manufacturers now have responded in this way to the demands of consumers and my own calls for action," Mr. Basford said.

Letters Sent

The minister already has sent letters to food manufacturers associations noting that the packaging act gives the government the power to limit sizes and shapes of containers if it feels there is undue proliferation of package sizes tending to confuse or mislead consumers.

The Consumers' Association of Canada has been asked by the minister to submit a list of commodities considered as candidates for standardization. The list includes powdered detergents, breakfast cereals, household paper products, soft drinks, shampoos, ketchup and peanut butter, the release said.

DEAR ABBY...

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I read the letter signed "WEAK AND TEMPTED" from the man who was hooked on prostitutes. He claimed he was happily married and his wife lacked nothing in that department.

I agree with you, he needs a head doctor, but I have a better solution that could solve his problem and save his marriage. If he gets pleasure out of paying for his sex life, tell him to hand his wife the usual fee. She will be happy and he will be satisfied. Some people don't place any value on something unless they pay for it.—Birmingham Ala. Reader.

DEAR READER: That might solve HIS problem, but what if his wife prefers to maintain her amateur standing?

DEAR ABBY: Why are you so fair in everything else, but when it comes to the subject of OBESITY, you are completely without mercy!

A mother wrote she was "heartsick" because her 21-year-old son brought his 20-year-old fiancee home, and she was fat!

Why didn't you tell that mother to encourage her son to stick with pride by the girl he loved, no matter what, even if she had one eye in the midle of her head? Instead, you recommended the mother get her son aside and instruct him to tell the girl she should do something about her weight while she was still young.

If I were a young man, I would be more concerned about my mamma's set of values than my girl's bulk.

Disappointed In You.

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: Aw, come on, now. No one can help being born with one eye in the midle of his head, but a girl who is so fat she can hardly fit into the largest chair in the room, and eats as if there's no tomorrow has a problem. And someone who loves her should encourage her to solve it.

DEAR ABBY: This is for the heartsick mother whose son brought home a fat fiancee. Some men prefer fat women. To them fat is beautiful.

Mamma should leave her son alone. Some of the happiest mariages I know are those of thin men and fat, jolly wives. Heartsick mother should rejoice. Her son is getting at least twice as much woman! — Cecile

DOCTOR'S SAFETY TIP FOR MOTHERS

Always Be Ready for Unexpected

TORONTO (CP) — If doctors could give only one home safety tip to mothers, it would probably be to be ready for the unexpected.

Each proud new stage in a child's development brings with it a new set of dangers. A young child, testing skills and made of curiosity, will try anything.

The council on Family Health in Canada, organized by the drug industry in Canada, has some stage-by-stage safety advice.

It begins by urging mothers never to leave a newborn infant alone in the house or out of sight outdoors.

He should be checked occasionally to be sure nothing is covering his face to interfere with his breathing. He does not need a pillow, which could smother him. He should have a firm mattress, a strong crib with bars he cannot get his head through.

Keep cribs and carriages free of potentially dangerous things such as filmy plastics, coins, pins, plastic bags.

Hold a baby in your arms to feed him. He could choke trying to use a propped bottle.

Be sure bath water is the right temperature and never leave a baby alone in the bath for any reason. The council says about 25 infants drown in baths in Canada every year.

If you have a mobile for your baby, be sure it is firmly attached. His other toys should be sturdy, non-inflammable, too big to swallow, too tough to break and have no sharp edges or points.

Lead in paint is not the problem it once was, but it still is worth being sure that cribs and children's toys are painted only with lead-free paints.

Somewhere around three or four months the baby will turn over by himself, and places that might have been safe once are no longer. Never leave an infant alone on a bed, a couch, a table.

By six months he will probably sit up. As soon as he can, he willl be safest in his carriage or high chair when he is wearing a harness.

You will also have to start fencing in stairways, because once a baby can sit, he will start trying to creep.

At whatever age, when you are busy, put your child in a safe place where you can see him. A playpen with slats or mesh he cannot get caught in, can be moved around with you.

Saanich Police Commissioner Appointed

Ocean Cement manager L. J. Glassford, 2920 Tudor, has been appointed to the Saanich police commission by the provincial cabinet.

He replaces C. W. Speers, who resigned because of ill health, said commission chairman and Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis.

Glassford's term runs to the end of this year.

TORONTO, August 5th — Hooray for Summer . . . and all the sun, fun and good food. Sometimes, however, when we over-indulge our taste for all the luscious fresh fruits and vegetables, we bring on an attack of that distressing ailment — diarrhea — or "Summer complaint". If this happens to you or your children . . . do as over 6 generations of Canadians have . . . take DR. FOWLER'S EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY. Dr. Fowler's, formulated from roots and herbs, quickly relieves nausea and cramps and restores intestinal balance. What a comfort to have Dr. Fowler's Extract on hand . . . any Season!

WHEN I VISITED A YOUNG MOTHER RECENTLY . . . I was very impressed by her calmness when her baby became fretful. "He's probably crying because he's teething", she said. "Whether it's a tummy upset, simple colic, fever or fretfulness, it is often caused by irregularity, particularly at teething time. That is why I always keep BABY'S OWN TABLETS on hand. While they soothe the pain, Baby's Own Tablets work gently to relieve the cause." So, mothers, remember . . . when irregularity upsets your baby, do as mothers have been doing for over 60 years . . . try Baby's Own Tablets.

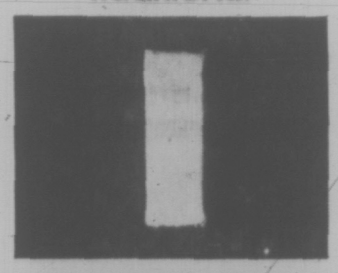
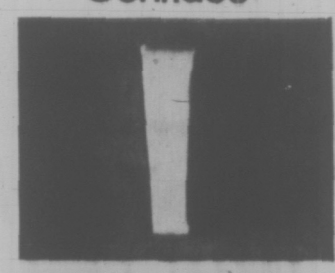
Here are five improvements your sanitary napkin should have had years ago.

And five reasons why you should switch to Confidets now.

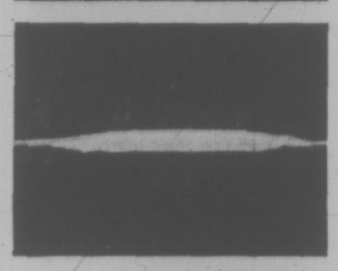
Traditional:

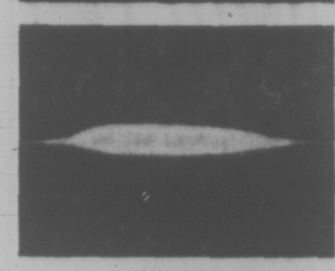


Confidets:

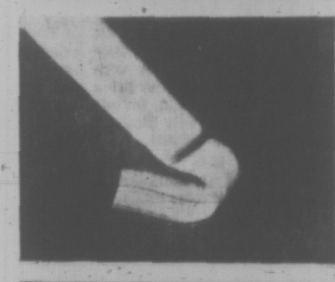


1 The traditional napkin is rectangular shaped, too wide in the middle to fit properly. That means bunching and folding over. The Confidet is a tapered napkin, narrower across the centre. That means a snug, comfortable fit.

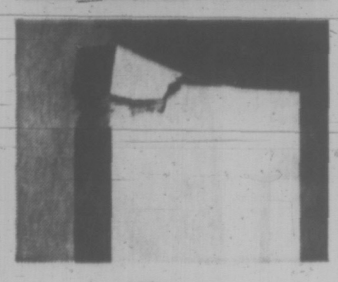


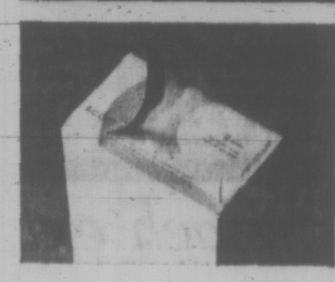


2 Confidets are thicker through the middle. That means extra absorbency. Traditional napkins are flat, the same thickness all over. So how can they be really effective? Yet Confidets aren't bulky, because they get slimmer towards the ends, see? One more thing, Confidets have a special inner layer of plastic that's bonded in place so it positively can't slip. That means extra security.

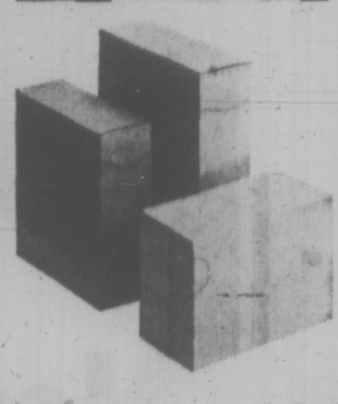


3 The covering of traditional napkins is soft. But soft and flimsy. That means the material will rip apart when attached to a sanitary belt. Confidets combine a strong underlayer with a soft, finely textured outer layer. You get end tabs that don't shred. They fasten securely and stay fastened.

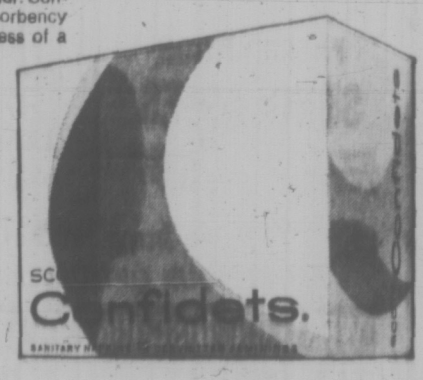




4 Traditional napkin packages have perforated openings that tear unevenly and break fingernails. Confidets have a convenient tearstrip. Just lift up the tab, and rip! It's that simple. Traditional napkin boxes don't close properly once they've been opened. That means exposing new napkins to dust and dirt. Confidets have a reclosable lid. Take out one napkin, then close up the package tight, till next time.



5 Traditional napkins come in "regular" and "super" absorbencies. If you have a heavier flow at the start of your period, you should really have both on hand. You needn't bother. Confidets are both. You get the absorbency of a super pad and the trimness of a regular, all in one napkin.



Confidets: the napkin that makes others seem old-fashioned.

Emphysema Factor In Accident Death

Severe emphysema, a lung disease, was a major factor causing the death of a man who failed to regain consciousness after being hit by a car July 2, a coroner's jury was told Tuesday.

A pathologist from Royal Jubilee Hospital said the man, Alfred Nelson Cull, 61, of 3933 Winton in Saanich said that the lung disease aggravated the condition of the man following the accident, bringing death. He said he found broken ribs and some abrasions when he conducted the post mortem.

Dr. Thomas Peet, testifying at the opening of the inquest said Cull had been his patient for about eight years.

Peet said Cull suffered nine broken ribs making breathing difficult and was assisted by a respirator during treatment at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

He said Cull had emphysema, a lung disease, but was otherwise in good condition before the accident.

The inquest was adjourned until Tuesday, 7:30 p.m., at the Law Courts. Cull was knocked down by a car at Broad Street and Johnson.

TWO MEN IN COURT AFTER BOMB HOAX

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Two men charged with extorting $560,000 from Qantas Airlines in a bomb hoax last May appeared today in a Sydney court, and a police inspector said they had signed confessions admitting involvement in the plot.

The men—Peter Pasquale Macari, 36, and Raymond Jans Poynting, 28—entered no plea. Magistrate M. Farquhar ordered them held for another hearing Aug. 12 and refused them bail.

Inspector V. Taylor told the court that Macari was the man calling himself "Mr. Brown" who had placed a home-made barometric pressure bomb in an airport locker May 26 along with notes claiming that a similar bomb set to go off at a certain altitude was on a Qantas Boeing 727 in flight with 130 persons aboard. He said Poynting assisted Macari in the scheme.

No bomb was found in the airliner, which landed safely after circling the airport for several hours. By that time the airline had paid off the extortionists.

Zulu Chief's Beer Mug Restored to Tribe

By PETER GREGSON

ESHOWE, South Africa (Reuter) — One of the world's most unlikely national treasures has been restored to its people, the Zulus of South Africa.

The treasure is a three-handled silver beer mug that Queen Victoria once presented to the great Zulu chief Cetewayo.

The heavy, rather plain container, which holds about two pints, bears the inscription: "Presented to Cetewayo by Queen Victoria August 14, 1882."

The story began in 1879 when Cetewayo and his people were defeated by the British in the final battle of the Zulu war.

Cetewayo had led his people in rebellion the year before and the proud and fierce warriors, armed only with assegais (small spears), and hide shields had inflicted severe losses on the well-equipped British troops.

Cetewayo fled, but soon afterwards he was captured and exiled from the Zulu homeland, in the northeastern coastal region of South Africa, to Cape Town.

LUNCHED WITH QUEEN

But Cetewayo, whom the British recognized as the king of the Zulu nation, spent only a short time in close confinement. In January, 1881, he was allowed to live on a farm under mild supervision.

The following year he was allowed to visit England and on Aug. 14 he lunched at Buckingham Palace with Queen Victoria, who presented the vanquished Zulu leader with the silver beer mug.

In 1883 Cetewayo was allowed to return to Zululand and rebuild his capital at Ulundi. But he found his people torn by civil war and himself came under attack from one of his former generals, Zibepu, chief of one of the Zulu sub-tribes.

In the war that followed Cetewayo's brother Ndabuku suffered a crushing defeat and Zibepu attacked the royal kraal (village) at Ulundi.

Cetewayo fled, leaving behind all his belongings including the silver beer mug.

In the sacking of Ulundi that followed, the mug was lost, and it remained forgotten for half a century.

Then, in 1936, a young Zulu called Gobi found a metal object in the mud of a stream he was crossing. Two days later he cleaned it and found it was a bright, shiny mug which bore an inscription.

He took the mug to a local trader, C. R. Harris, who bought it for a sum he cannot remember and kept it at his home until this year.

The now-elderly Harris toyed for some time with the idea of restoring the mug to the Zulu people.

At a recent ceremony in the Zululand Historical Museum here, he handed it over the acting paramount chief, Israel Ka Solomon, and chief executive officer Chief Gatsha Buthelezi, himself a direct descendant of Cetewayo.

The two chiefs then presented the mug, still in fine condition despite its eventful 89-year loss, to the museum to be kept forever as part of the Zulus' national heritage.

HONEYMOONERS

KAANAPALI, Hawaii (AP) — Guitarist Laurindo Almeida and lyric soprano Deltra Eamon are honeymooning in this quiet Hawaiian resort after a quiet wedding Tuesday.

It was the second marriage for both Almeida, 53, a native of Brazil, and Miss Eamon, 38, a native of Canada. They said they plan to live in Los Angeles.

SOPHIA . . . busy girl

Loren to Enter Convent for Sin

NEW YORK (NYT) — Sophia Loren is entering a convent. But not for long. In her next film, The Sin, she will play a nursing nun who falls in love with a passionate Communist patient. The Italian-language movie, to be released by Columbia, will be directed by Alberto Lattuada and will co-star Adriano Celentano as Miss Loren's wayward lover. It will be produced — starting this September in Milan — by Carlo Ponti, the man who recently produced Miss Loren's "Mortadella." He is also the man lucky enough to be her husband.

A Columbia representative, scarcely ashamed of his Sin, said that the movie, written by Antonino Guerra and Ruggiero Maccari, will be much more than a love story, that it will be a comedy that makes a strong social commentary.

Will producer Ponti make Mrs. Ponti take a siesta after she has committed her "Sin" to celluloid? "Oh, no!" the jolly, enterprising produced exclaimed. "In January she will start Man of La Mancha in Spain with Peter O'Toole. After that, we are supposed to do 'Anna Karenina' in Russia." Well, it's no "sin" to keep busy.

Franco Zeffirelli pleased romantics and theatre managers alike with his Romeo and Juliet a few seasons back, and now he's getting that romantic urge again. The 48-year-old director, now winding up Brother Sun, Sister Moon — about St. Francis of Assisi — will do a new version of Camille early next year in France and Italy for Paramount, the company that sponsored both Romeo and Juliet and Brother Sun, Sister Moon.

Zeffirelli is no stranger to Dumas's loose but lovely lady. Theatregoers with memories that include distinguished flops will recall the director's 1963 staging of Lady of the Camellias. Susan Strasberg coughed impressively in that production, but it is not yet known who will star in Zeffirelli's film. Garbo did OK in George Cukor's 1936 film, but since she is probably not available for a remake, may we suggest that Zeffirelli check Sophia Loren's schedule?

* * *

Kurt Vonnegut Jr. and producer Lester Goldsmith are as happy as children on their birthdays to say that their movie of Vonnegut's play Happy Birthday, Wanda June is all wrapped up and ready to be opened by Columbia pictures. And now the busy duo is ready to proceed with Vonnegut's second play — Wings and Pictures.

They hope to stage it on Broadway, come December, and to begin work on the film version next summer. Goldsmith describes Wings and Pictures as "Vonnegut's off-centre, comic view of women's lib — as seen through the eyes of a woman who liberates herself by painting erotic pictures." Well, now we're beginning to get the picture.

Trees Gardeners' Despair

By HILDA BEASTALL

A tree-shaded garden is a cause of despair for gardeners accustomed to open, sunny sites.

After living with the trees for a full year (as we advise owners of new properties) the decision will be easier to reach as to which, if any, of the trees need to be removed.

During the year, it is well to ponder on plants not dependent on the sun's full rays all day.

Sooner or later, you will think about ferns.

Here on the coast are many fine native ferns. We don't advise removing them from wildland properties, but do look at some of the kinds in the woods and on rocks. A specialist fern grower will have these and others to add to your collection when you become an addict.

Hilda

If the trees on your property are natives, chances are some ferns already grow within your boundaries.

Depending on the location of your property, there are three fairly common ferns you may come across, all of which will add interest to a shady garden as you develop it through the years: the handsome sword fern; the smaller deer fern; and the licorice fern.

Sword ferns in dense woodland will often reach five feet in height. Three feet in the garden is quite common, making a plant or two of great value for grouping as background for rarer kinds of ferns or for associating with shade-preferring flowering perennials.

Outlining a path or grouped at the base of rocky outcroppings, sword ferns are handsome in summer and in winter. Only after new fronds begin growing in spring do the oldsters brown off. Remove and add them to your soil which is likely to be thin with trees.

Notice the spore cases in a double row on the reverse of side leaves, or pinnules. They are cinnamon brown to orange, according to the season.

Deer fern is a smaller plant, characterized by the spore-bearing fronds being distinct from the non-fertile fronds. Those bearing spores arise three feet above the centre of the shorter, basal non-fertile fronds.

This is a fern of the woodland as you might expect from its name. The fertile fronds die back over winter, but the sterile ones are evergreen, making the fern valuable for the winter garden.

The common polypody, or licroice fern, is known to all dwellers of local rocky areas, for it is one of the first plants to grow on rocks and rotting logs, as soon as the mosses have become established.

Thin soil is suitable. If in a hot dry place, these ferns disappear in summer but are renewed as soon as fall rains moisten the mosses, so that all winter they are again clothing the areas with beauty.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

The word, "kibitzer," was incorporated into the English language as a colloquial term in 1929. Its public acceptance was given impetus by a play that opened on Broadway in Feb., 1929 called "The Kibitzer." Heading the cast was a young actor named Edward G. Robinson. Mr. Robinson's role was to point out to card players in different games what they should do, and they should have done.

Dictionaries define kibitzer as a "spectator at a card game who looks at the players' cards over their shoulders." In the bridge world, which has adopted the "kibitzer" as a natural appendage to a bridge game, an extension of the definition was added: a kibitzer is one who not only watches a bridge game, but also has the license to make comments about the bidding and the play.

There is, however, one major unwritten limit on a kibitzer: he must refrain from making comments during the bidding or the play.

Today's deal serves as an example of the kibitzer in action.

	NORTH ♠ A K Q ♡ 10 8 7 6 2 ◇ 8 5 4 ♣ 9 3
WEST ♠ J 9 8 5 ♡ A K Q J ◇ J 2 ♣ Q 7 2		EAST ♠ 10 7 6 4 ♡ 5 4 ◇ Q ♣ J 10 8 6 5 4
	SOUTH ♠ 3 2 ♡ 9 3 ◇ A K 10 9 7 6 3 ♣ A K

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	5◇	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡.

West cashed the king and ace of hearts, after which he continued with the heart queen. East discarding a club as South ruffed. South then drew trumps and claimed the balance of the tricks.

As the cards were being dealt out for the next deal with nobody having made any comment on the previous deal — the kibitzer chimed in, addressing himself to West: "You could have defeated the contract!" And the kibitzer was quite right, as the post-mortem anaylsis revealed.

After cashing the king and ace of hearts, West should have led the jack of hearts (not the queen) to trick three. In East's mind, the impression would now be created that South possessed the heart queen. And, quite naturally, East would ruff the third heart lead with his queen of diamonds.

Declarer would, of course, overruff the queen with the king — and, simultaneously, West's jack of diamonds would be promoted into a winning trick.

Thus it is demonstrated that when important things are overlooked in the heat of battle, an alert kibitzer can serve a useful role.

Here's a new doubly-true alphametic, and doubly so at that!

Each letter stands for a different digit. You will notice that all ten digits are represented, which makes it what is called an "ideal" alphametic. What's the QUARTET?

SUZUKI BEST DEALS AND SERVICE FREDERICK MOTORS 616 QU

YOUR HEALTH Dr. Walter Alvarez

Now that summer is here, all children who as yet cannot swim should be taken to a pool and taught, first, not to fear the water, and then, how to swim. I am always distressed when I read as I commonly do, that a boat tipped over and some children or adults were drowned, when if they had not panicked and had known how to swim, or even to "tread water" they could have been saved.

★ ★ ★

In a release from the New York State Department of Health, Dr. H. S. Ingraham gives a number of good tips for safety in swimming:

Make certain that you and your children know how to swim well.

Know your limitations and stay within them.

Never swim alone.

Never swim at night in an unlighted area.

Be sure of the depth of water before you dive into it. Too many young people who broke this rule have broken their neck, and for the rest of their days were paralysed from their neck down.

Don't swim when tired and exhausted. I once nearly drowned when, after climbing all day in the California mountains, I dived into a river and found that the current was almost too strong for my tired muscles.

Don't try to save a drowning person unless you know life saving techniques and have learned how to grab a drowning person in such a way that he cannot grab you and pull you down with him.

Don't swim off of a beach where there is no lifeguard or any good swimmer around.

If you get a cramp, don't panic; keep floating and try to relax. If good swimmers are nearby, tell them you are in trouble.

Most advisers about swimming say, "Don't go swimming within an hour after eating." I doubt if this admonition is necessary, because when I was a boy in Hawaii, my schoolmates and I would often, right after luncheon, dive into the ocean, and never once in those years did any of us get cramps or suffer because of our habit.

★ ★ ★

In these days when so many people have swimming pools it is important for them to know the safety rules. Most important is for the person to have a high fence around his pool with a gate that can be locked when it is not in use. This is not only for the protection of the children of the house, but of other children in the neighborhood. An unguarded swimming pool can be a dangerous place for small children.

Located on a QUIET, cul-de-sac and backing on a park-like area, this specially-designed home is better than my words in describing it. Driving along the winding street of fine new homes, you will notice rustic post lamps, the old-brick and siding exterior enhanced by leaded-glass windows and the treed surroundings. A large entrance hall leads off to a most attractive and comfortable family room with its fireplace. This groundlevel floor is completed by a panelled utility room, bathroom, workshop, and fourth bedroom. The carpeted stairs open on to a lovely living room and dining room featuring a most attractive floor-to-ceiling fireplace. Kitchen is a home-maker's pleasure with its large eating area of dinette-size. The extra-large master bedroom has bathroom ensuite, but does not in any way detract in size from the other two bedrooms and bathroom. To view this exclusive listing —

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD
1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc. for rent, or property for sale, start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public every day.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to Fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open daily Monday through Saturday 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you call.

BOSTON—A federal judge today ordered Dr. Daniel Ellsberg to stand trial in California for releasing the top secret Pentagon Study into the Vietnam war.

U.S. District Judge W. Arthur Garrity Jr. set Aug. 16 as the arraignment date for Ellsberg in Los Angeles. In ordering Ellsberg removed to California, he went along with the recommendation of U.S. Magistrate Peter W. Princi to deny defence motions for a hearing on whether the government used illegal eavesdropping and wiretapping to produce evidence in gaining the indictments against Ellsberg.

WASHINGTON — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield met for half an hour today with U.S. State Secretary William Rogers, then left for home on a regular commercial flight to Toronto and Ottawa.

Stanfield, who arrived here Wednesday for a hastily-arranged visit following his return from China, briefed Rogers on statements made to him in Peking by senior Communist Chinese officials. He gave a similar briefing Wednesday to Henry Kissinger, presidential adviser who recently went to Peking to arrange a President Nixon's proposed visit.

SAUGUS, Calif. — A great dane on a leash dragged a young woman onto the busy Antelope Valley freeway Wednesday where she was hit and killed by a truck. Jeannie Thompson, 24, North Hollywood, was dead on arrival at Intervalley Hospital.

Authorities said the woman illegally parked her auto on the freeway and took the big dog for

HIPPIES 'BEGGING LIKE DOGS'

AFGHANISTAN NO PROMISED LAND

LONDON (UPI) — Young hippies from the United States and Europe wander around cities and towns in Afghanistan "begging like dogs" for hashish and selling their bodies for a fix, a British educator said Wednesday.

Peter Willey, senior housemaster at Wellington College, in Berkshire County, said he saw scenes such as this again and again during recent travels to Afghanistan for a study of slavery for the British Antislavery Society.

"Two evils, slavery and narcotics which, acting together, are destroying not only the lives of the Afghans but tens of thousands of young men and women all over Western Europe and America," Willey said.

He termed Afghanistan the main supplier of narcotics to Britain.

He told of hippies — Americans, British and other Europeans — "in sun-drenched squares that reek of death and decay or in sordid tawdry lodging houses.

"They have become dependent on scraps of food, contemptuous charity, and a daily supply of hashish or other narcotics provided by Afhgans who treat them as weird human pets," Willey said.

"I have seen young Englishmen begging like dogs for scraps of bread and hash," he added. "Disdain and scorn are in the eyes of the Afghans — and rightly so.

"The hippies, who have set out with their dreams and fanatsies of reaching an illusory promised land, have become broken, smashed and empty like so many garbage cans. Such is the effect of hashish.

"These young men sell their possessions, their bodies, and those of their girlfriends to buy their hash," the educator said. "Those who may not descend so far return psychologically and physically addicted.

"The embassies, understandably enough, largely disown them and can no more than send them back home by the shortest and cheapest route—if they are willing to go," he said.

Willey said he thought the United Nations should be informed of the situation in Afghanistan.

A spokesman for the antislavery society said Willey's report came as no surprise.

"It is well-known that this has been a source of embarrassment and annoyance to our embassies and consulates in a number of Asian countries," he said. "These hippies go out to these countries, get hooked on some drug, spend their last bob on it, and then have to go and beg from the locals.

"In Afghanistan they have been most kind to them," he said.

Motorcyclist's Arm Broken

A 17-year-old motorcyclist who was injured in a collision with a car Tuesday was reported in good condition at Royal Jubilee Hospital Wednesday.

Robert A. Emel, 206 Menzies, received a broken arm and cuts in an accident at Midland and Beach Drive, which occurred about 6:10 p.m.

Oak Bay Police identified the driver of the car as Cecil J. Rose, 2893 Sea View.

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — The Press Trust of India reported Tuesday that a private of the Indian border security force was killed when Pakistani forces shelled a border checkpoint in India's West Bengal state.

U.S. PoW Flight Report Denied

STOCKHOLM (AP) — The Scandinavian airline SAS said today a report that United States military officials had asked the airline to fly 187 U.S. prisoners of war from Laos to Europe was incorrect.

The earlier report had brought a flood of official denials from U.S. and North Vietnamese officials.

The airline said today its office in West Germany was approached in mid-July by a "private individual" who wanted to arrange a charter flight from Laos to Rome "for 187 passengers."

"It was never mentioned that the category of passengers was military personnel," SAS said in a statement released today.

The airline said it made preliminary arrangements and was ready to sign a contract, but this "has been called off by the private contract of SAS in Germany."

The "private individual" was not identified by name or nationality.

The report of a prospective PoW flight was first published Wednesday night in Sweden's biggest newspaper, Dagens Nyheter, which said the flight would be on Aug. 12.

This was followed by an announcement from an SAS spokesman that U.S. military authorities in West Germany had asked to charter a DC-8 to airlift 187 PoWs from Vientiane, the Laotian capital, to Rome by way of Bangkok, Thailand.

SOFT PEDAL SCHEME

Dagens Nyheter charged SAS with "giving way to political pressure to soft pedal the whole thing."

Editor-in-Chief Boerje Dahlqvist maintained the newspaper's report, attributed to "sources," was "wholly correct as it stands," but refused to identify his sources. He did not specify what "political pressure" he said had been applied.

"When we deliberated about the publication of this report, everything seemed in order and there was no reason to hold it back," he said. "I'm not prepared to guess as to what will happen now."

SAS spokesman Jack Herbert said: "Nuts to Dagens Nyheter. I can't give any explanation about this whole thing other than to say that a lot of people were unavailable when this story broke and that we could not sort things out until now."

In Washington, President Nixon's news secretary, Ronald L. Ziegler, said the U.S. government "has not been informed of any such plan, nor has the U.S. participated in negotiating a plan such as suggested in the Swedish newspaper."

"Further, the U.S. government at any level has not requested the Scandinavian airline, SAS, to proceed as suggested in the Swedish newspaper," Ziegler added.

Xuan Thuy, North Vietnam's chief negotiator at the Paris peace talks, called the reports "excessive imagination," while Truong Gia Nhan, an attache at the North Vietnamese embassy in Stockholm, termed the report a "fabrication" and said it was "totally unfounded."

SOLITARY SOLITAIRE

DETROIT (UPI) — Lewis Sutter retired 10 years ago because he was "tired of working." He's been playing solitaire ever since and still hasn't gotten bored.

Sutter, 71, who lives alone in a basement apartment, said he averages about 40 games a day and keeps a record of each one.

Since June 1, 1961, he's played 132,400 games of solitaire, but has worn out only seven decks of cards in the process.

Fire Vote Set Aug. 14

Residents on North Pender Island will vote Aug. 14 on a $50,000 fire protection referendum.

The advance poll will be held Aug. 11. Voting place on both dates is North Pender elementary school.

Just over 2,000 persons are eligible to vote, but many of them are absentee property owners.

Last December, a fire protection referendum including both North and South Pender Island was defeated when it failed to receive 60 per cent approval. Voters on North Pender supported the referendum but South Pender residents were opposed.

Old Masters Jackpot For Family

MARSEILLE (Reuter) — A family in this French city struck it rich Thursday when they were told that three dust-laden paintings hanging in their suburban home are masterpieces by Rembrandt, Velasquez and Watteau.

A Marseille art expert said he discovered the masterpieces while restoring and cleaning them for the family, which wished to remain anonymous.

The Rembrandt and the Velasquez are self-portraits of the artists in their 20s and the Watteau is a miniature of a woman and child accompanied by a musician.

Three other experts in Zurich and Amsterdam have confirmed his analysis, the Marseille expert, A. R. Thur, told reporters.

He said the paintings are worth more than $1 million.

Central Saanich Game Laws Not Changed

There will be no open season on deer, pheasant or other game in Central Saanich.

Mayor A. M. Galbraith said Wednesday he will tell Jack Lenfesty, provincial conservation officer, Central Saanich council won't change bylaws to allow controlled hunting as Lenfesty suggested recently.

Hostage, Gunman Die in Fight

MUNICH (AP) — Police gunners shot dead a masked gunman, and a woman hostage held as a human shield was fatally wounded during a fierce shootout early today.

The hidden riflemen shot the man, a bank raider, at the wheel of a fast car. As bullets ripped into the roof, the woman he had pulled into the seat beside him slumped fatally wounded to the floor.

Moments later, a second gunman was captured when police stormed the building where he was holding out.

Three other hostages, two women and a man held inside the building for a $562,000 ransom, were rescued. One of them was taken to hospital with slight injuries.

The shooting broke out shortly before midnight as the gunmen suddenly made an escape bid from the branch of the bank.

The first gunman had a woman hostage walking before him, her hands tied in front.

As they got into the front seat of a waiting car, a police officer walked across the road with the ransom money in a sack. It consisted of 20 packets of banknotes.

As the officer neared the car, the other gunman appeared at the bank's door with another woman hostage in front of him as a shield.

At that moment a police rifleman hanging out of the darkened window of an apartment and shot at the guman already across the road took a chace in the car.

The man slumped forward, but as he did his finger apparently caught the trigger of his machine-pistol and bullets sprayed everywhere.

The other gunman leapt back into the bank pulling his woman hostage with him. All the police surrounding the area opened fire. Eyewitnesses said the car literally shuddered under the impact of bullets.

As the hail of bullets stopped, Deputy Mayor Hans Steinkohl ran forward and pulled the injured woman hostage from the vehicle.

She was taken to hospital where she died shortly afterwards.

A squad of police then smashed through the bank's door firing as they burst into the building, and a few seconds later the remaining gunman was dragged out.

33 Facing Single Trial

VANCOUVER (CP) — New information was laid in provincial court Wednesday charging 33 persons with taking part in an alleged marriage of convenience scheme.

The crown will proceed against those charged at one trial, no date for which has yet been set.

It is alleged a conspiracy existed to obtain landed immigrant status for males in Canada by making false or misleading statements with the application of admission.

Previously, it was alleged Canadian-born women and in some cases female impersonators were paid to go through a marriage ceremony with East Indian men so the men could become landed immigrants.

A preliminary hearing on the first allegation bogged down on points of law with at least one lawyer appealing a provincial court ruling to the provincial supreme court.

26,000-ACRE INFERNO NEARS TOWN

Residents Flee Raging Fire

Smoke from 26,000-acre fire, raging out of control, billows over Rogers Pass

GOLDEN (CP)—Most of the 150 residents of Donald Station fled their homes Wednesday night when a raging 26,000-acre forest fire roared to within 2½ miles of the small lumbering community 15 miles north of Golden. The flames have burned for more than two weeks and are out of control.

"Family after family are loading up their pickup trucks and getting out as fast as they can," said Helen Drage, who lives on a small farm about a mile out of town.

"It was a terrible sight earlier in the day, but the wind is going down now and I think everything will be all right."

Forestry officials had warned of a possible evacuation, but most of the residents left on their own. The Drages and their daughter, however, decided to stick it out, at least until today.

"I'm not worried, but there isn't much else we can do," said Mrs. Drage. "We can't go off and leave our chickens and pigs."

STRONG WINDS

A forestry spokesman said strong, changing winds have made it difficult to get a hold on any of the big fires burning in the Mica Creek-Golden area just inside the B.C.-Alberta border, 135 miles west of Calgary.

Arthur Krane, a deputy ranger with the forest service, said 200 men worked through the night with heavy equipment to construct fire roads around the town.

Krane said the roads would not be completed until later today, and if the wind blows from the north before then "Donald could easily be lost."

An RCMP officer said the fire is also threatening the Trans-Canada Highway, but "Donald will get it before the road does."

WILL STAY

The town is supported by Evans Products Ltd. which has a $20 million sawmill operation in the area.

Mat Seery, a lumber grader with the company, said he and most of the other men are prepared to stay and fight for the mill and their livelihoods.

"If the mill burns, I'm out of a job. I have to fight."

CP Rail, which has a survey crew with mobile homes in the town, hooked the trailers to trucks Wednesday so they could be moved out at a moment's notice.

TOWN DESTROYED

The area is no stranger to fires. The original town was destroyed by a forest fire near the start of the century, and 13 years ago a local fire destroyed a sawmill.

The blaze, named Sue Fire by forestry officials, was started by a lightning strike which hit a lumber scrap heap at Susan Lake, 20 miles west of Donald Station.

The fire has since cut through a swath of timber 13 miles by six miles, most of it fire, spruce, cedar and hemlock.

Many of the firefighters are area loggers and some youths moving through along the

40 DIE, 100 HURT IN TRAIN CRASH

BELGRADE (CP)—At least 40 persons were reported killed and about 100 injured Wednesday night when a passenger train and a freight collided head-on in a curve southeast of the Yugoslav capital.

The casualties were all aboard the passenger train, a six-car, short-haul motor train known as a rail bus.

Strom Wants Ottawa Out

Premier Harry Strom of Alberta today called for the withdrawal of the federal government from medical care and hospital insurance programs.

Strom, who released a text of his submission this morning told the premiers' conference the federal government should "unconditionally transfer federal funds or taxing powers" to the provinces in getting out of the fields. Ottawa pays 50 per cent of costs of medicare and hospitalization on a national average basis.

Strom said he was sure that a mutually acceptable agreement could be reached to provide provinces with an adequate source of funds to account for both inflation and productivity factors in different provinces.

'ABSURD'

The current health system is "absurd" in its "almost complete lack of any meaningful element of financial accountability," said Strom.

He also asked the federal government to abandon its plans to tax the employers' share of medicare premiums, a measure which could cost Alberta taxpayers $9.6 million next year.

It will cost B.C. taxpayers an estimated $10 million.

Strom also called for improvements in the methods of getting Prairie grain to market.

AMONG TOPICS

Fiscal and economic questions, the "chicken and egg war," pollution control and drug addiction are among the topics being discussed in the two-day meeting.

Ontario Premier William Davis, attending his first premiers' conference, said he will suggest that the premiers consider making their annual meeting a more formal continuing structure with a permanent staff to carry on the work during the year.

Several premiers indicated their willingness to discuss the constitutional issue with Quebec Premier Bourassa in

Germ War Treaty Presented

GENEVA (Reuter) — The United States and the Soviet Union presented to the Geneva disarmament conference today a draft treaty banning germ weapons.

The 25-country conference is expected to reach agreement on the draft tabled by its co-chairmen in time for it to be submitted as an agreed conference document to the United Nations General Assembly in New York next month. But some Western and non-aligned delegations said outside the conference hall today they will seek some revisions in the draft.

TWO DOCUMENTS

Presentation of the draft follows negotiations here between Western and Communist delegations on merging two basically similar documents outlawing germ warfare, one tabled by Britain two years ago and the other by the Soviet Union and its Communist allies in March this year.

The 11 article draft outlaws the development, production, stockpiling and acquisition of biological weapons.

It also calls for the destruction of existing stocks "as soon as possible but not later than ... months."

The number of months was left blank and the first speaker at today's session, Soviet delegate Alexei Roschchin, said this was because some delegations said original proposals for a three-month time-limit might be insufficient for them. He did not name the countries which had taken this view.

One-China Policy Held By Canada—Trudeau

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau says Canada will not support a United States proposal for a two-China policy in the United Nations.

Mr. Trudeau made the statement Wednesday in reply to questions at a news conference during a three-hour visit to St. John's on an Atlantic provinces tour.

Mr. Trudeau said Canada had told the U.S. "we would in no way support any resolution that could be considered a two-China policy."

Asked about the U.S. plan to oppose any move to oust Nationalist China from the UN, he said the matter would be decided by bargaining.

Canada had adopted a one-China policy when it recognized the Peking government.

WANTS TAIWAN IN

The U.S. announced Monday it would support the seating of mainland China in the UN but would ask the General Assembly this fall to allow Nationalist China to retain its seat.

Eighteen countries supporting Peking have submitted a resolution that would expel representatives of Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist government on Formosa from the UN.

The resolution would have the General Assembly recognize the People's Republic of China as the only legitimate representative of the country.

Turkey recognized Communist China today and simultaneously cut off relations with the Nationalist government on Taiwan.

CANADIANS IMPRESSED BY RUSSIAN ARCTIC

MOSCOW (UPI) — Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien returns to Canada today after leading a party of 10 northern specialists on a 17-day, 11,000-mile tour through Siberia and the Soviet north to see how the Soviet Union handles northern development.

Chretien told newsmen Wednesday his group was "most impressed by the gas pipelines and a dam which the Russians have built on permafrost.

Chretien said "on portions we were able to observe, there appeared to be no environmental damage and good re-establishment of the vegetation."

Canada has no pipelines in its permafrost regions.

Chretien said he expected a Soviet delegation of northern experts to visit Canada "this fall."

Court Says Sharp Must Give Testimony

MONTREAL (CP) — Lawyer Robert Lemieux obtained a subpoena Wednesday requiring Mitchell Sharp, federal external affairs minister, to testify in court in connection with last October's kidnapping crisis.

The subpoena, won in Superior Court, requires Sharp to appear Friday before Court of Queen's Bench.

In his petition for the subpoena, Lemieux said he wants Sharp to explain why he refused to negotiate the safe conduct to Cuba of a rogatory commission headed by a Montreal judge to obtain testimony from seven persons sent there in exchange for the safe release of James Cross, British trade commissioner.

Cross was abducted Oct. 5 by terrorists and released to police Dec. 3 in return for the safe conduct to Cuba of the seven persons. The Front de Liberation du Quebec claimed responsibility for the abduction.

TESTIMONY VITAL

Lemieux said testimony of Jacques Lanctot, Jacques Cossette-Trudel, his wife Louise, Pierre Seguin and Marc Carbonneau, among those sent to Cuba, would provide much-needed information on three of Lemieux's clients.

Lemieux is defending Francois Lanctot, Claude Morency and Andre Roy accused of various charges made against them before the October kidnappings of Cross and Quebec Labor Minister Pierre Laporte who later was slain.

The trio face more than 40 charges involving dynamite possession and conspiracy to kidnap. They allegedly robbed a University of Montreal credit union of $58,000.

NEWS BRIEFS

Race Track Burns

TIJUANA, Mexico — An explosion and fire early today destroyed the grandstand, clubhouse and offices of the famous Caliente race track here. Damage was estimated at between $10 and $15 million but no injuries were reported to people or animals. — (Times News Services)

Typhoon Hits

TOKYO (Reuter) — At least 14 people were known dead and six missing after typhoon Olive roared across southern Japan on Thursday with winds of up to 80 miles an hour.

Hotel Destroyed

TERRACE (CP) — Fire today caused extensive damage to the Terrace Hotel, a three-storey structure in downtown Terrace. There were no reports of injuries as the blaze destroyed a coffee shop, beer parlor and cocktail lounge.

Securities Thefts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. Senate investigators disclosed Wednesday that more than $101 million in securities have been reported stolen in the United States so far this year — more than twice the total for all of 1970 and more than $100 million more than for the last two years combined.

Police Attacked

LONDONDERRY, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Residents of Londonderry's Roman Catholic Bogside district stoned police moving into the area to help with flood relief after a cloudburst Wednesday night.

U.S. Role 'Defensive'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon has declared United States responsibility for offensive ground-combat operations in Vietnam at an end.

"American forces in Vietnam today, as you can tell from reading the reports, are in defensive positions — frankly just defending the area in which we have responsibility," Nixon told a news conference Wednesday.

Defence Secretary Melvin R. Laird said a few hours later the president's remarks mean the first part of the administration's Vietnamization program is "virtually completed."

Meanwhile, the usually hawkish House of Representatives voted for the first time Wednesday for a measure to end the war in Vietnam.

By 297 to 108 votes, it approved an amendment to the military conscription bill.

KY OFF BALLOT

SAIGON (UPI)—The South Vietnamese supreme court today declared Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky ineligible for the presidential elections. Gen. Duong Van "Big" Minh threatened to pull out, and it appeared President Nguyen Van Thieu may be the only candidate.

The supreme court said Ky and Nguyen Tran, a minor candidate, did not have the necessary backers and could not run in the Oct. 3 elections. Minh threatened once again to withdraw on grounds Thieu was rigging the election and that his followers were being harassed.

"The Thieu government has used the meanest tricks to prevent the Ky-Le Ticket from obtaining the full endorsement of the required number of provincial councilmen and to keep this ticket out of the presidential race," he said.

Peking N-Missiles Reported by U.S.

WASHINGTON (WP) — New evidence gathered by U.S. intelligence indicates that Communist China has begun to deploy a small number of nuclear-tipped, medium range ballistic missiles, according to informed government sources.

The missiles have an estimated range of about 1,000 miles, far too short to threaten U.S. territory, but enough to reach some military installations and one or two large cities in the Soviet Union as well as other targets in Asia, including Japan and Taiwan.

Deployment of operational MRBMs by the Chinese has been anticipated for some time at the Pentagon, but evidence that emplacement had actually started was only recently obtained.

The number of operational missiles spotted so far by U.S. reconnaissance satellites is said to be quite small fewer than 20

U.S. defence department officials say they are reluctant to draw any conclusions — based on this small initial deployment regarding how many of these missiles the Chinese will eventually field. Officials say they still believe that Peking is placing more emphasis on development of an intermediate-range ballistic missile, one that would have a range about twice that of the MRBMs now being deployed.

A missile able to fly 2,000 miles would enable China to situate these weapons well back from its own borders, providing some safety against attack if their locations were not pinpointed by an enemy. Such rockets would also be able to reach many more of the Soviet Union's heartland cities, thus adding to their deterrent effect.

U.S. Defence Secretary Laird, estimated in March, that the Chinese would have "a modest number" of both types of missiles by mid-1972.

The Chinese nuclear arsenal, which also includes a number of light and medium jet bombers, is still miniscule compared with that of the Soviet Union.

As some defence analysts view things, however, the Chinese are approaching a point where the Russians could no longer be certain they would escape nuclear retaliation entirely if they staged a surprise attack on China.

VICTORIA, B.C., THURSDAY, AUGUST 5, 1971 —PAGE 21

TENTATIVE AGREEMENT REACHED

Police Pay Fight Over—Maybe

Police in Victoria and Saanich Wednesday night reached tentative agreement with their commissions on a pay dispute.

If accepted by the memberships of the Victoria Police Union and the Saanich Police Association and police commissions, the pattern is expected to be extended to Oak Bay and Esquimalt policemen.

No details were released by either side pending ratification meetings, but leaders of both sides are recommending the settlement.

Key issue in the dispute was pay parity with Vancouver and lower mainland police forces, sought by policemen here and opposed by the police commissions. Greater Victoria police, at the first-class constable classification, earned $728 a month at the end of last year. Vancouver area police in a one-year settlement this year, earn $887 a month at the comparable classification.

An earlier offer by Victoria which would have brought the first-class constable pay to $884 by July 1 of next year was rejected by policemen.

Meetings to accept or reject the tentative settlement are expected to be held Friday night.

A joint statement was issued shortly before midnight by both sides after an all-day session involving both Victoria and Saanich under mediation officer Clark Gilmour.

The statement said "a basis of settlement has been reached," that both sides unanimously agreed to recommend settlement and that the terms would be submitted to memberships and police commissions wihout delay.

"Full credit must be given to Mr. Gilmour for his patience, perseverance and assistance generally, without which it is most doubtful that terms of settlement acceptable to all negotiating committees would have been reached," the statement said.

Police Slowdown Costing $20,000 Monthly: Pollen

The Victoria police union's work-to-rule stance is costing the city $20,000 a month in lost revenue, council's finance committee learned today.

Committee asked for a full report on the effects of the union action from the police commission.

All police operations that involve revenues to the city are being "soft-pedalled," acting Mayor Clyde Savage said.

City officials later refused to estimate the total cost of the police union's bargaining lever.

Both sides in the pay contract dispute reached a secret tentative settlement Wednesday night, city manager Bill Hooson said, and the city is not prepared to jeopardize the chances of a final agreement.

The work-to-rule stance brought a blast from Ald. Peter Pollen, who indicated he did not think the matter was entirely the responsibility of the Police Commission.

'TREASON'

"I don't think we have asked enough questions. I mean, who's running who?"

"I am advised we are losing $20,000 a month. As I mentioned earlier, 100 years ago this would have been considered treason."

POLLEN

Hooson said that his understanding of the work-to-rule guidelines is that police are exercising their right to use "discretion" in booking certain offences.

Ald. Tom Christie described it by saying there is "free parking" on one-hour and two-hour roadside parking areas.

Savage said "it's quite obvious" that the simple revenue areas of police work are being "soft-pedalled" but added "I can assure you that things like break and entry" are being watched even more than normally.

WHY PAY?

When Savage said the city has to treat the situation like any business might, Pollen interjected:

"When you have a strike in any business, you don't pay your workers." The police, however, are getting paid and not doing their jobs, he added.

"I don't suggest they are not protecting citizens . . . but they are also losing $20,000 a month."

Hooson said later the full details of what the work-to-rule action has cost the city will be revealed following a work agreement.

Aldermen Support Delay In Hike on Permit Fees

Increases on construction permit fees should not become effective until Sept. 1, Victoria council's finance committee recommended to council today.

The committee made the decision after a delegation of contractors said the industry had not been given fair warning of the increase, established last spring at budget time.

Mike Griffin, a plumbing contractor and spokesman for the building industries, said businessmen did not disagree with the philosophy of the 20-per-cent increase in permit fees, but they thought notification of the hike was "overlooked" by city officials.

Fees already charged at the higher rates may be redeemed on request.

The delegation left the meeting while committee was talking of a three-month extension of the old fee structure.

Ald. Peter Pollen suggested an Oct. 1 date, but Ald. Tom Christie, opposing any extension initially, finally settled for Sept. 1.

LEFT OUT

The industry argued that contracts awarded before the fee hike did not include the increase in their costs.

Tom Lawson, an electrical contractor, said his firm might have lost $300 on its contract on the new Victoria Press Ltd. building, had the fee increase become effective two days earlier.

Christie said contractors always must face changes in cost between contracting bidding and awarding dates.

But Griffin said "we get a guarantee on the prices we are going to get" form supply companies.

"We know all costs: this one of the few areas where we find all of a sudden a significant increase.

The decision to increase the fees had been made to make fees charged pay for the service.

Cyclists May Pay to Ride

The free status of the bicycle rider in Victoria may be coming to an end.

Council's finance committee today asked for a report from city officials on the feasibility of licensing and registering all bicycles in the city.

Comptroller Jim Bramley said council should not expect to make any money out of such an operation, but registration might provide some control.

Estimates of the number of bicycles operating in the Greater Victoria area are as high as 55,000.

Committee was told Oak Bay at present licenses bicycles and keeps track of serial numbers on a computer.

SANDRINGHAM

'Plenty of Life' Left in Strike

The Victoria Labor Council was told Wednesday night there is "plenty of life" remaining in the 44-week strike against Sandringham Private Hospital.

"There are those who say Sandringham is a lost cause," said Jack Phillips, co-ordinator for Local 1311 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees on strike since Sept. 30 for a first contract.

"All I say is, judge not the play 'til the final curtain is down."

He criticized hospital administrator Mrs. Margaret Reynolds — "The scabherder in chief" — and Labor Minister James Chabot — "the cream puff."

NO APOLOGIES

Both persons, he said, have claimed that 75 per cent of the original 28 strikers are working at other jobs. He offered no apologies if this was the case because those who are working elsewhere are in difficult financial circumstances.

"If these reports are true, and I believe they are, they indicate Chabot is working in cahoots with the management of Sandringham, with the deliberate aim of smashing the strike," he said.

He believed that "the stage is being set" for a second attempt to decertify Local 1311 as bargaining agent for the employees. An earlier attempt by management was rejected by the Labor Relations Board.

Taking aim at those who have replaced the strikers and kept the private hospital running, Phillips said "scabs are on a level with child molesters."

He said success or failure of the Sandringham strike would make the difference between opening the way for a big organizing drive among "thousands of bitterly exploited service workers, mostly women" or closing the door to this opportunity.

Phillips said Chabot is not intervening "because the cabinet does not want him to move, because geriatric care should be a government responsibility, not of petty speculators."

One delegate said he has heard "a lot of flowery talk" but "we do nothing but talk. I imagine in another 10 months it will be the same."

Phillips said he had been sent here only 3½ weeks ago as full-time co-ordinator and that there was no one working full time on the strike before. He said he would debate this subject, but privately.

Amchitka 2 Nudges Premiers

The Victoria-based organization opposed to the proposed nuclear test blast on Amchitka Island in October will not be satisfied with a mere postponement of the blast — it wants the test abandoned.

The group — Amchitka Two — has sent a telegram to the provincial premiers attending a conference in Victoria which started today. The telegram read:

"Postponement of the nuclear test on Amchitka Island to May 1972 is not good enough. We want immediate united action by the premiers of the provinces of Canada to urge President Nixon to cancel 'Cannikin'."

The U.S. Senate last week voted to postpone the blast until May, 1972, unless Nixon authorizes it. The test is a five-megaton explosion on the small island in the Aleutian chain.

Numerous conservation and ecology groups have opposed the scheduled test, saying it will endanger wildlife and possibly trigger earthquakes and tidal waves on the Pacific Coast.

Amchitka Two has also announced it plans to hold a silent vigil on the lawn in front of the Legislative Buildings to commemorate the 26th anniversary of the dropping of an atomic bomb on Hiroshima, Japan, on Aug. 6, 1945.

The vigil will be held through the night.

RCMP Warn of Bad Trips From 'Orange Sunshine'

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police today issued a warning to potential drug-users about a bad strain of LSD which is circulating in the city.

The drug, known locally as "Orange Sunshine," has been found to contain mostly strychnine, a deadly poison.

The force's drug squad reports the drug has caused bad reactions among users. Fifteen cases have been reported in the last three weeks.

The drug is said to have originated in California.

Oak Bay 'Vigilantes' Form

Seventy-five residents of Oak Bay's Windsor Park area Wednesday night formed a group which will make suggestions on community issues to Oak Bay council and planners.

The group was formed in response to a challenge by the Vancouver Island Chapter of the Architectural Institute of British Columbia's Project Peninsula.

One of the chief topics under discussion was a Vancouver developer's bid to erect two nine-storey towers on a block immediately overlooking the park.

A committee of four was formed and instructed to examine the master plan for Oak Bay, proposed in 1967.

Other issues of concern to the group are the cleaning up of Oak Bay Beach, the threat of spot zoning for high density developments and the provision of adequate neighborhood amenities.

The meeting is the second to be held in the neighborhood. The first was in mid-July.

The next meeting will be held Sept. 9 at 7 p.m. in the park pavilion with subsequent meetings planned for the first Thursday of each month.

IT WOULD BE UNFAIR to term last May's Miles for Millions a failure. After all, thousands of young and older Victorians tackled the 25-mile hike, and other thousands paid off for the miles these achieved. But the blister derby has proved a much less than total success, and it's probable that any future march will be planned to an altered recipe.

In May, a take of $100,000 was hoped for.

In the aftermath of the walk, a total collection of about $75,000 in mile-rates was expected.

Today, with approximately $60,000 in the kitty, University of Victoria Miles for Millions organizers are confronted by what amounts to a $15,000 deficit.

This could mean that various agencies among which the take is to be distributed will receive smaller sums than anticipated when cheques are sent out.

As a last-ditch hope of boosting the total, the campus committee has decided on a direct appeal to citizens who haven't been called on by marchers they backed.

If you happen to be among these, you are asked to deposit money pledged in the Bank of Montreal Miles for Millions account, or to turn it in at Uvic Student Union building.

Bob Ballam, acting committee chairman, tells me that another march won't be held for at least 18 months. Meanwhile, he and other committee members are questioning the wisdom of spreading returns from the next walk among 21 different organizations — an approach which Ballam fears may have reduced public interest.

"I think we should get back to fund-raising for one specific international project," he said.

A sound idea. Perhaps a well-focussed project like the original one—the providing of schools-in-vans for underdeveloped countries—might do the trick.

Tucked away in my fishing kit are some anglers' lures from far Siberia. My sister who returned to Vancouver last week from travels in foreign parts, came on them in an Irkutsk shop and decided to gladden my heart with them.

One item is a set of little wabblers fitted with treble hooks, that I mean to dunk as soon as may be. But what intrigues me most is a card of artificial "flies" the like of which I've never seen before.

Each consists of a large hook sparsely-wrapped with red thread. Up front is tied a sheaf of four white plastic whigs laid back to back.

Perhaps some sport fisherman who has wet a line in Siberian waters would be kind enought to fill me in on these creations. How do you fish 'em, and for what?

In the course of any workyear, I meet a number of men and women who want to be writers, but few who back their hopes by fitting ideas with words. And much too often, those who do so give up the struggle after a few rejection slips.

Not all of them, though. One of the exceptions called me this week in the course of a visit to Victoria. He asked me if I remembered a long talk we had over coffee in Toronto many years ago.

I was in the magazine business then, and talked with a lot of working and would-be writers. Still, I did recall a young man who not only wanted to write, but was toiling with ideas and words.

For him, the break-through has been a very long time coming. There were interruptions of various sorts, setbacks and discouragements. I'm glad to report, however, that he has just placed a five-part serial with CBC radio.

It's scheduled for September. Byline, John Keith, and more power to his typewriter.

FOREST BLAZE NEAR GOLDEN

★★★★

Town Flees Raging Fire

Smoke from 26,000-acre fire, raging out of control, billows over Rogers Pass

GOLDEN (CP)—Most of the 140 residents of Donald Station fled their homes Wednesday night when a raging 26,000-acre forest fire roared to within 2½ miles of the small lumbering commmunity 15 miles north of Golden. The flames have burned for more than two weeks and are out of control.

"Family after family are loading up their pickup trucks and getting out as fast as they can," said Helen Drage, who lives on a small farm about a mile out of town.

"It was a terrible sight earlier in the day, but the wind is going down now and I think everything will be all right."

Forestry officials had warned of a possible evacuation, but most of the residents left on their own. The Drages and their daughter, however, decided to stick it out, at least until today.

"I'm not worried, but there isn't much else we can do," said Mrs. Drage. "We can't go off and leave our chickens and pigs."

STRONG WINDS

A forestry spokesman said strong, changing winds have made it difficult to get a hold on any of the big fires burning in the Mica Creek-Golden area just inside the B.C.-Alberta border, 135 miles west of Calgary.

Arthur Krane, a deputy ranger with the forest service, said 200 men worked through the night with heavy equipment to construct fire roads around the town.

Krane said the roads would not be completed until later today, and if the wind blows from the north before then "Donald could easily be lost."

An RCMP officer said the fire is also threatening the Trans-Canada Highway, but "Donald will get it before the road does."

WILL STAY

The town is supported by Evans Products Ltd. which has a $20 million sawmill operation in the area.

Mat Seery, a lumber grader with the company, said he and most of the other men are prepared to stay and fight for the mill and their livelihoods.

"If the mill burns, I'm out of a job. I have to fight."

CP Rail, which has a survey crew with mobile homes in the town, hooked the trailers to trucks Wednesday so they could be moved out at a moment's notice.

TOWN DESTROYED

The area is no stranger to fires. The original town was destroyed by a forest fire near the start of the century, and 13 years ago a local fire destroyed a sawmill.

The blaze, named Sue Fire by forestry officials, was started by a lightning strike which hit a lumber scrap heap at Susan Lake, 20 miles west of Donald Station.

Many of the firefighters are area loggers and some youths moving through along the

40 DIE, 100 HURT IN TRAIN CRASH

BELGRADE (CP)—At least 40 persons were reported killed and about 100 injured Wednesday night when a passenger train and a freight collided head-on in a curve southeast of the Yugoslav capital.

Strom Wants Ottawa Out

Premier Harry Strom of Alberta today called for the withdrawal of the federal government from medical care and hospital insurance programs.

Strom, who released a text of his submission this morning told the premiers' conference the federal government should "unconditionally transfer federal funds or taxing powers" to the provinces in getting out of the fields. Ottawa pays 50 per cent of costs of medicare and hospitalization on a national average basis.

Strom said he was sure that a mutually acceptable agreement could be reached to provide provinces with an adequate source of funds to account for both inflation and productivity factors in different provinces.

'ABSURD'

The current health system is "absurd" in its "almost complete lack of any meaningful element of financial accountability," said Strom.

He also asked the federal government to abandon its plans to tax the employers' share of medicare premiums, a measure which could cost Alberta taxpayers $9.6 million next year.

It will cost B.C. taxpayers an estimated $10 million.

Strom also called for improvements in the methods of getting Prairie grain to market.

The 12th annual premiers' conference got under way after Premier W. A. C. Bennett greeted eight other premiers on the steps of the legislative buildings. Newfoundland Premier Joey Smallwood is the only premier absent.

AMONG TOPICS

Fiscal and economic questions, the "chicken and egg war," pollution control and drug addiction are among the topics being discussed in the two-day meeting.

Ontario Premier William Davis, attending his first premiers' conference, said he will suggest that the premiers consider making their annual meeting a more formal continuing structure with a permanent staff to carry on the work during the year.

Several premiers indicated their willingness to discuss the constitutional issue with Quebec Premier Bourassa in

MONEY CRISIS TWISTED BY LONDON

LONDON (Reuter) — The European currency crisis revolving around the United States dollar and the French franc took a new turn today when some London banks were quoting different rates for transactions in the two currencies.

For commercial deals, the French unit was being quoted at its official intervention rate of 5.5125-5.5126 to the U.S. dollar while for non-commercial transactions the quote was 5.5000-5.5075. (See page 18).

Germ War Treaty Presented

GENEVA (Reuter) — The United States and the Soviet Union presented to the Geneva disarmament conference today a draft treaty banning germ weapons.

The 25-country conference is expected to reach agreement on the draft tabled by its co-chairmen in time for it to be submitted as an agreed conference document to the United Nations General Assembly in New York next month. But some Western and non-aligned delegations said outside the conference hall today they will seek some revisions in the draft.

TWO DOCUMENTS

Presentation of the draft follows negotiations here between Western and Communist delegations on merging two basically similar documents outlawing germ warfare, one tabled by Britain two years ago and the other by the Soviet Union and its Communist allies in March this year.

The 14 article draft outlaws the development, production, stockpiling and acquisition of biological weapons.

It also calls for the destruction of existing stocks "as soon as possible but not later than ... months."

The number of months was left blank and the first speaker at today's session, Soviet delegate Alexei Roshchin, said this was because some delegations said original proposals for a three-month time-limit might be insufficient for them. He did not name the countries which had taken this view.

One-China Policy Held By Canada—Trudeau

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau says Canada will not support a United States proposal for a two-China policy in the United Nations.

Mr. Trudeau made the statement Wednesday in reply to questions at a news conference during a three-hour visit to St. John's on an Atlantic provinces tour.

Mr. Trudeau said Canada had told the U.S. "we would in no way support any resolution that could be considered a two-China policy."

Asked about the U.S. plan to oppose any move to oust Nationalist China from the UN, he said the matter would be decided by bargaining.

Canada had adopted a one-China policy when it recognized the Peking government.

WANTS TAIWAN IN

The U.S. announced Monday it would support the seating of mainland China in the UN but would ask the General Assembly this fall to allow Nationalist China to retain its seat.

Eighteen countries supporting Peking have submitted a resolution that would expel representatives of Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist government on Formosa from the UN.

The resolution would have the General Assembly recognize the People's Republic of China as the only legitimate representative of the country.

Turkey recognized Communist China today and simultaneously cut off relations with the Nationalist government on Taiwan.

CANADIANS IMPRESSED BY RUSSIAN ARCTIC

MOSCOW (UPI) — Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien returns to Canada today after leading a party of 10 northern specialists on a 17-day, 11,000-mile tour through Siberia and the Soviet north to see how the Soviet Union handles northern development.

Chretien told newsmen Wednesday his group was "most impressed" by the gas pipelines and a dam which the Russians have built on permafrost.

Chretien said "on portions we were able to observe, there appeared to be no environmental damage and good re-establishment of the vegetation."

Canada has no pipelines in its permafrost regions.

Chretien said he expected a Soviet delegation of northern experts to visit Canada "this fall."

Court Says Sharp Must Give Testimony

MONTREAL (CP) — Lawyer Robert Lemieux obtained a subpoena Wednesday requiring Mitchell Sharp, federal external affairs minister, to testify in court in connection with last October's kidnaping crisis.

The subpoena, won in Superior Court, requires Sharp to appear Friday before Court of Queen's Bench.

In his petition for the subpoena, Lemieux said he wants Sharp to explain why he refused to negotiate the safe conduct to Cuba of a rogatory commission headed by a Montreal judge to obtain testimony from seven persons sent there in exchange for the safe release of James Cross, British trade commissioner.

Cross was abducted Oct. 5 by terrorists and released to police Dec. 3 in return for the safe conduct to Cuba of the seven persons. The Front de Liberation du Quebec claimed responsibility for the abduction.

TESTIMONY VITAL

Lemieux said testimony of Jacques Lanctot, Jacques Cossette-Trudel, his wife Louise, Pierre Seguin and Marc Carbonneau, among those sent to Cuba, would provide much-needed information on three of Lemieux's clients.

Lemieux is defending Francois Lanctot, Claude Morency and Andre Roy accused of various charges made against them before the October kidnappings of Cross and Quebec Labor Minister Pierre Laporte who later was slain.

The trio face more than 40 charges involving dynamite possession and conspiracy to kidnap. They allegedly robbed a University of Montreal credit union of $58,000.

KY OFF BALLOT

SAIGON (UPI) — The South Vietnamese supreme court today declared Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky ineligible for the presidential elections. Gen. Duong Van "Big" Minh threatened to pull out, and it appeared President Nguyen Van Thieu may be the only candidate.

The supreme court said Ky and Nguyen Tran, a minor candidate, did not have the necessary backers and could not run in the Oct. 3 elections. Minh threatened once again to withdraw on grounds Thieu was rigging the election and that his followers were being harassed.

"The Thieu government has used the meanest tricks to prevent the Ky-Le Ticket from obtaining the full endorsement of the required number of provincial councilmen and to keep this ticket out of the presidential race," he said.

Peking N-Missiles Reported by U.S.

WASHINGTON (WP) — New evidence gathered by U.S. intelligence indicates that Communist China has begun to deploy a small number of nuclear-tipped, medium range ballistic missiles, according to informed government sources.

The missiles have an estimated range of about 1,000 miles, far too short to threaten U.S. territory, but enough to reach some military installations and one or two large cities in the Soviet Union as well as other targets in Asia, including Japan and Taiwan.

Deployment of operational MRBMs by the Chinese has been anticipated for some time at the Pentagon, but evidence that emplacement had actually started was only recently obtained.

The number of operational missiles spotted so far by U.S. reconnaissance satellites is said to be quite small — fewer than 20.

U.S. defence department officials say they are reluctant to draw any conclusions — based on this small initial-deployment regarding how many of these missiles the Chinese will eventually field. Officials say they still believe that Peking is placing more emphasis on development of an intermediate-range ballistic missile, one that would have a range about twice that of the MRBMs now being deployed.

A missile able to fly 2,000 miles would enable China to situate these weapons well back from its own borders, providing some safety against attack if their locations were not pinpointed by an enemy. Such rockets would also be able to reach many more of the Soviet Union's heartland cities, thus adding to their deterrent effect.

U.S. Defence Secretary Laird, estimated in March, that the Chinese would have "a modest number" of both types of missiles by mid-1972.

The Chinese nuclear arsenal, which also includes a number of light and medium jet bombers, is still miniscule compared with that of the Soviet Union.

As some defence analysts view things, however, the Chinese are approaching a point where the Russians could no longer be certain they would escape nuclear retaliation entirely if they staged a surprise attack on China.
